> [From the Washington Star.] These persons who are writing from Washington to the press with the view of prejudicing the country against the acquisition of Cuba, are harping on a story saying that the friends of the measure in public life, entertain the idea of having the United States Government offer three bundred millions of dollars for the Island. No one has a better opportunity than ourself to as-certain precisely the views of the friends of the measure on such a point, for a day rarely indeed passes, in the course of which we do not converse with some one on the subject who is as well posted upon it as it is possible for any one to be. Up to this time, we have yet to hear the to be. Up to this time, we have yet to hear the first suggestion from any such party, leading to the impression that the idea of going much beyond the original offer of Mr. Buchanan is dreamed of by any of them. That offer was one hundred million dollars, it will be recollected. Among the unthinking advocates of Cuban annexation around us, the notion of paying in American money for the Island is very unpopular; the belief being very general, that if we wait a time, the inevitable tendency of approaching events will cause the ripe pear to drop into han to the tragical affair that was soon to take place. Behind them came some files of soldiers; then the condemned man, walking, in the dress of a Bulgarian peasant, his two arms tied with ropes, and held by several kavasses who followed him. The criminal was led out to a spot in view of all present. Ishmael Pasha and his staff alighted. The preparations for the poor fellow's execution were very soon finished—nothing, in fact, having been done, excepting the binding of fact, having been done, excepting the binding of

The fact that every succeeding steamer from Havana is now bringing to our shores numbers of old Spaniards as well as Creoles, with their nearts blistering with dissatisfaction with their Government, has opened the eyes of all the public men here to the fact that, at this moment, the feeling for revolution is much more general and ripe than in this country on the 4th of July, 1775. Hence the indisposition of these first above referred to, to pay for that which they feel assured we may soon easily secure through a revolution on the Island. Men of prudence and true national chivalry, however, take a very different view of the subject, and are willing t of the dishonor of even seeming to seek to defraud Spain of what she has so long possessed, more especially at a senson in which she stands, per-haps, in greater need of available means than at any previous period of her history, as chequered as that has been. We bought the Louisiana territory for twelve millions, and if but by way of showing Spain that we are not what she may take us to be we have no doubt that American Buoing opinion, which usares Cuba so unanimously, will be quite willing to have this Government pay even eight or ten times as much for that Island, as the great and important purchase from Napoleon cost us. Piling ir Ur.—At the recent term of the Circuit Court at Noblesville, Ind., the case of Blair vs. McVey, for crim. con., was tried.
