The Canadian farmers are thus made competitors, to some extent, as with the farmers of the West, in supplying the wants of the the statement of the Tribun, which conveys the idea that the claims put up by Mr. Menard, the competitors, to some extent, as with the farmers of the West, in supplying the wants of the the statement of the Tribun, and have England thus get object. Here is the article taken from the Tribun, and the money paid for the Canadian portion will be slow to return; for their manufactures cannot pass free of duty into the Canadas.

The fishery business will be stimulated by the removal of restraints, and the increased supply will doubtless reduce the price. Many million dollars worth are annually consumed. The treaty also admits, duty free, Canadian lumber, and many other articles for which there is a large demand in the eastern States.

The benefits of this treaty are not equally shared by the whole Union; but on the whole it is favorable and valuable to the United States, and very liberal towards the British Provinces.
