that the Democratic part, of Philadelphis, talk of celebrating the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, which occurs on the 17th of the present month. Asit is under constitutional law that this country has flourished and the liberties of the people been maintained, a celebration of the event which permanently established the Constitution is pesulfarly appropriate. The organic law of the maintained, a celebrated of the permanently established the Constitution is peculiarly appropriate. The organic law of the country cannot be too frequently consulted, nor its principles be too freely investigated. It is a volume of political wisdom in itself, and its cut to make political parties avoid the study tends not only to liberalise public santi ment; but to make political parties avoid the danger of encroachment upon popular liberty, or of adopting principles which, striking against constitutional right, are sure to destroy the party which sustain them. It is much more sensito celebrate the triumph of civil and religious freedom, as secured in the great charter of our liberties—the Constitution of the United States—than to waste powder over a temporary suc-DIRROTORS:
