The readers of the Dispatch well know how he has carried out his threats. All truth, all sense of propriety and chestic, has become now no has carried out his threats. All truth, all sense of propriety and charity, has become swallowed up in the vindictiveness, malice and unreleating hostility which rankles in his mind towards these men, because they were only too efficient in doing their duty as far as he was concerned. concerned. concerned. His use of the villainous and despicable sys-tem of black wail, (praising those who act the sycophant towards him, and calumniating oth-ers who have independence enough to refuse the spinute ho tries to exact,) is well known, and has spone uncrebuked long enough. Such a system has been in vogue in larger cities for years; but it was left to the reporter of the Dispatch to in-troduce it in Pittsburgh. In the article in yesterday's Dispatch, the attempt to make the present police responsible for the acts of their predecessors, is about as honest as to fix the misdemeanors of the few upon the many. The reporter of the Post never applied to the present police for protection, and the aswas committed two years ago, when not one of the present watch were on duty. It affords a protty fair idea what foundations he has for his

Does any one, who is at all acquainted with the local of the Dispatch, imagine that his virtuous indignation at the deplorable immoral state of the watch, would have been aroused, if he had not himself fallen into their hands? We can safely answer, no.

The phrase day, as herepeaks it to less that of yester-times, and dwells upon it complacently, as if there was something peculiarly with in the epithet. We are but little for that. A charge of sillness, however, comes with a bad grace from one who has ever shown himself the shalfrom one who has ever shown himself the shall lowest of persons, and although long attained the years of manhood, unrecognized as a man. He probably imagines that his indefatigable at-tempts to raise a badge of manhood on his upper lip, gives him some claim to that title; but his efforts in that way, only prove how hard it is to accomplish what is impossible. accomplies what is impossible. We will defend no one who is in wrong; but when through malicious motives a whole class is assailed, we will make known the notives, and defend those who are unjustly assailed, as our watchmen have been in this instance.
