A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL. We wished our readers the same last year, and to many of them it probably proved such. To others it may have been a year of loss or sorrow It was a year of trial to many, and a year of nusual disasters. But it is past, and we may hope that the year upon which we enter to-day will be more propitious, more fruitful and pros-

While other nations waste their energies and lives and treasures in sanguinary wars, we are at peace, and can probably remain so. fire-box. There is as yet no reason to apprehend another partial failure of crops. Nor is there any reason to apprehend that the present financial difficultimed the country will long continue. Peace, York. This is said to be the first time the cerevest before us. We hope all our readers will enjoy them in full measure.

THE LEGISLATURE. The Legislature meets to-morrow morning, at Harrisburg. The members from our county, seven in number, will be at their posts. They all left here, we believe, last week. A large portion of the members of the House are new mem ers; and so far as we are informed, are gene: rally gentlemen of intelligence. We shall watch the proceedings at Harrisburg this winter with much interest; and expect to have one or more correspondents there, who will keep us informed of the progress of events at the seat of our State Government. During the first five weeks of the session there will be lively time there. The organization of the two Houses is the first business. The speakers and officers of the two houses are to be elected. The death of one Democratic Senstor, and the absence of another renders it a little uncertain which party will secure the offices of the Senate. We be lieve, however, that the Senate. We be lieve, however, that the Democrats will prevail there. In the House the new party will have it their own way. With a new man for speaker, will not be done with the rapidity and corrections that it it has heretofore been with Col Jack for clerk, and, in fact, for a part of the time, clerk and speaker both. No man in the State probably understands the routine of business in that position as well as he does; but the politic camplexion of the House indicates that some cale will fill the post. Then, soon after the organization, a State Treasurer is to be chosen.
