of their party, suddenly find themselves thrown war, and in part to the fact that for basis of their success and influence has suppred from under them. It is a singular fact, too, that those editors who cried out most lustily, eight months ago, for "fusion"—for the amalgamation ply from the discovery of gold having sottled into something like uniform results: our people into something like uniform results: our people into something like uniform results: our people slaugh upon the Democracy, are among the first to lose their political position. Their rallying ory succeeded; and the Democracy suffered a temporary defeat. But the advocates of "fusion" discover now that they have evoked a spir-

"Where am I to 90," is now the question that many a political and political editor asks, who but a few months ago imagined they were going into an exterminating contest with the Democratic party. The result of that contest, they supposed, was to be to them a glorious triumph, and a "revel on the spoils of victory." It is hard that such a bright dream should be so suddenly and rudely destroyed. But it is the fate of war; a fate evoked by the dreamers themselves. AIP. KREVIL! thou pride of the million!
Thy Hars are the best that we see!
Thy Store is the shrine of devotion.
To friends who stand firally to thee!
Thy triumph has made "bunglers" tremble
When Pashion's gay form stands in view;
Thy BREVILE makes all the trade grumble.
Who may the work that you do,
Who may the work that you do,
Who may makes all the trade gru
Who in yain that you do,
Thy BREVILE makes all the trade gru
Who in yain try to indicate you. When Kossum waged a wild desolution,

And threatened our Hais to deform,
The Hais, then, of Fashion's foundation
