OUR CLIMATE, SOIL AND RIVERS. The climate of Western Pennsylvania has undergone some material changes within the last third of a century. Thirty years ago more snow third of a century. Thirty years ago more snow besides a great quantity was burned just as the fell in this region than now falls in the winter officer entered.

Dudley A. Mann, it is said, has resigned his pointed Adjutant General; an appointment which cannot take effect, it will be found, until Gen. Bowman's three years' term of service expires, after the 1st of March. The reason given is the seasons, and it generally laid lenger on the ground. There was then usually several weeks in this region for several years past will doubtless sitest the fact that the quantity of rain that falls each year is dimishing. The average-o rain each year was formerly from 22 to 26 inches; hardly ever less than 22 inches or more than 26 in the form of rain, snow and hail. For the last three years it has not reached the lowest figure; and for the year 1854 it did not reach 18 inches. Rains and snows sufficient to make 24 inches of water in twelve months, if distributed in the usual way through that period, would keep the Ohio navigable nearly all the year round for small boats, and at least two-thirds of the year for boats of the largest class. But with only about 18 inches falling in the year, the value of the river as a channel of commerce is greatly reduced. Whether this change, and this diminished supply of water, are to continue hereafter must de pend upon the causes to which the change is attributable. If it is to continue, the improvement or our rivers by locks and dams, or some other means, becomes a matter of great importance to the cities and towns, and the vast region of country that depend on the rivers for the supply of food and fuel, and for the general prosperity granted by Congress, and it is the intention of food and fuel, and for the general prosperity comes more uniform; subject to less frequent changes, and probably somewhat colder in winter and warmer in summer. Severe droughts will become more frequent. Diminished crops will result from the wearing out of the land, and the reduced supply of nutriment and strength the soil receives from decaying vegetation and abundant rains. Thirty or forty years hence it may be as difficult to raise wheat in Allegheny county as upon the worn out fields of New England. The yield of wheat here is less per acre now than formerly, and it may soon become an unprofitable crop. As the soil wears out by cropping, and the country is drained and becomes more dry by cultivation, the climate changes. It may become more healthy. At any rate, the nature of the prevalent diseases will change. Fever and ague will disappear,

A third of a century ago more than two-thirds of Allegheny county, and of the neighboring counties, were covered with forests. And in fact it may be said that three-fourths of the soil of all the regions of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and Virginia, from which come the supplies of water for our rivers, thirty years ago were covered with forests. There can be no doubt that forests attract clouds and attended the proportion, the moisture that forests attract dounds and reduced the sport of the supplies of the farity of the Commonwealth to receive into his custody the Cabinet of Geolologic, the Commonwealth to receive into his custody the Cabinet of Geolologic, the coverage of the Harrisburg Harry (netting the Secretary of the Commonwealth to receive into his custody the Cabinet of Geolologic, the coverage of the Harrisburg of

There is evidence all around us that a large number of people in our city are suffering from want this winter. We hear of instances every day of suffering and privation of the most lamentable kind. Some families go whole days without food or fuel; and praise worthy as are the exertions of individuals and societies, they cannot reach all the cases of desti ution in our midst. There is a want of funds.

Most other cities of the country have appropriated considerable sums this winter for the relief of the poor. Why don't our Councils follow the example? No one would object to the appropriation of a reasonable sum for the purchase of coal, food and clothing for the destitute that with he respectively will admit.
