such a desirable purpose. Elect a Senator who understands the need of such an improvement; who understands the interests of western Pennsylvania, and the value of the Ohio as a channel of commerce, and he will work for such an appropriation, and get it too, without any special instructions. The West has rights now that cannot be postponed without gross injustice. We hope no member of the legislature from the West will be found voting to rob the West of its rights,—its "clear and unquestionable" rights in this matter.

But the improvement of the Ohio river is not the only interest of this end of the State that needs attention at Washington.
