The following comments of the Journal of Commerce upon the Poole excitement in New York appears to me instruments. York appears to us just and proper:
"The mortal remains of Bill Poole, a victim tors appears to us just and proper:

"The mortal remains of 'Bill Poole,' a victim to the late brutal affray at Stanwiz Hall, were interred yesterday afternoon in Greenwood cemetry, and the event was made the occasion of a tremendous public demonstration, that could hardly have been viewed by good citizens with other emotions than those of mortification; pain and apprehension. To our mind, the spectacle extremental was darkly portentous, not only as foreshadowing the subversion of Subbath institutions, but evils it would be unwise to predict. It formed one of the series of rapidly occurring circumone of the series of rapidly occurring circumstances, serving to indicate the existence of deep feelings of sectarian animosity among large classes. The street-preaching excitement, the Gavazzi riote, the attacks on civic and religious processions, and existing religio-politico organizations, are manifestations of the same characten."

The Commercial Advertiser says of Poole:

"He was only known by his personal vices...

as a fighter, as a saloon keeper, as the nessociata of men who frequented lawless cotories and gambling houses. We repeat that he had no other public character. How then could this display he a nounlar endougement of eacting. other public character. How then could this display be a popular endorsement of anything but his personal character? At all events, conceding for a moment that the demonstration was called forth by his excismation that he died a true Are ican, and only regretted that he had been killed by a set of Irish, do his life and currently and anything death constitute a worthy example to set before our children? Are we to forget a whole life of anti American rowdy sm and lawlessness, in the petulent expression of dissatisfaction at the result of his career? Do we wish to teach our children that a true American may set the laws at defince, be a hired fighter for political parties, the associate of drunkards; rowdles, gamblers and puglists, and finally die by the hand of one of his associates, and yet, if he but utter the shiboleth of a popular sentiment on his deathpassed shiboleth of a popular scutiment on his death-bed, he shall and ought to be more benoved in his death than the virtuous American citizen whose whole life has been a steady contribution AND to the cause of private and public morality, and therefore to the improvement of the Commonwealth? And yet such in truth is the doctrine

Sixth inculcated by the ovation yesterday." A FAITHFUL GIRL -A case of woman's devotion has recently been brought to our knowledge which certainly equals saything we have ever met with in the realms of romance. The circumstances occurred in this city, and are perfectly well authenticated. While the small pox was reging here a few weeks are a recommendation. Fedit.

Fulton

Fulton It so happened that he was engaged to be marfied to a most estimable and amiable young lady.

No sooner did she hear of his condition than she determined at once that she would nurse him.
She underwent vaccination, and then went where they had taken her bretrothed to the pest-house. Here she found him, alone, sick wretched, deserted by all the world. And here she remained, like a ministering angel, waiting beside his bed of pain, soothing his distresses and attending to his wants. He died.
But how consoling must have been his last mo-

Though all the world had forsaken him, she, whom heloved better than all the world, remained faithful to the last. Her hand, it was that smoothed his pillows; her eyes still beamed upon him with mournful but unabated affection: into her ear he poured hie last words of love, of sorrow, and of hopes that in this world might never be fulfilled.

It recalled to our mind, when we heard it, the words that Bulwer puts in the mouth of one of words that Balwer puts in the month of one of his characters:—"To be watched and tended by the one we love, who would not welk blind and barefoot over the world."—Chicago Tribune, March 6.
