ADDENDA .- In our enumeration of the won- 32 Smithfield street. derful things that the legislature may do yet we forgot to mention the Chain Gang bill. As an argument for its speedy passage we present the following opinion of the Cincinnati Police Court. A young man named James Doyles had been arrested for stealing ten dollars from a coffeehouse keeper. He admitted the offence, but out of money. The Cincinnati Commercial says: "The Court remarked that he disliked very much to send so young a man to the Chain Gang, and, that, too, for a first offence; by s doing, he would have to associate with rogues and thieves of the lowest and vilest character, and but that the Chain Gang had been instituted for the purpose of doing good, but in the opinion of with associates of the blackest character.
