CAMOUFLETS AND PELISSIER. It is known that Gen. Canrobert has resigned Crimes, and that Gen. Pelissier is now commander in-chief. This Pelissier acquired what military reputation he has in the French wars in Algeria. The French invasion of the northern coast of Africa was unjust and cruel in itself, and was carried on with most sanguinary perseverance for many years against a brave and liberty-loving people on that coust of Africa. But it remained for Pelissier, then colonel, to cover the French name with infamy by an act of unparalleled cruelty and barbar ism. He was pursuing the tribe of Kabyles into the mountain passes, and, overcome by French discipline, the Kabyles fled to a large cavern with their women, children, and even their cattle. They were summoned to surrender, and refused. Col. Pelissier then threatened to build a fire at the mouth of the cavern and smoke and burn them unless they surrendered. The execution of such a barbarous threat they would not believe possible. But it was done. Vast quantities of dry wood and grass and every combustible material within reach was collected at the entrance of the burned all night, and a high wind drove the smoke and flames into the cavern. The next morning the silence of death reigned in the cavern where the night before more than six ence, broken by distant moans, prevailed there. At the entrance, the animals, whose heads had been covered over to prevent and stifled at the same time. To add to the horborn children lay amongst the chests and the provisions, and in other places were concealed the garments of the mothers. In fine, scattered in every direction were to be seen mutila-ted masses of human flesh, trampled under foot during the struggle of the night, and forming

We may expect then that Gen. Pelissier and Alexandria. his camouflets will soon subdue the beleagured city.
