PAPERS WANTED .-- The following papers are missing from our files of the Daily Post: Thurssending them to our counting-room. PITTSBURGH IN THE PAST AND FU-

A friend lately furnished us with copies o some old newspapers published in Pittsburgh between the years 1825 and 1830. In their adwould sound strangely to our readers at the present day. Oge notice is a "Caution to Trespassers," warning all persons—boys in particularto keep out of a certain orchard on the corner of Seventh and Grant streets; and threatening severe penaltics in case further depredations are committed. Some of the boys thus cautioned could probably be found among our business men now, who would probably be reluctant to own that they "booked" apples and peaches in their childhood. But if some of those "boys" can be found who needed such warning, the orchard itself has disappeared forever. That locality is now just about the territorial centre of the city; and for nearly a mile in every direction paved streets, dwelling houses, manufactories and railcoad depots extend over hill and plain, and form heavy and thriving portions of the city and suburbs. The owner of the orchard and the orehard itself have disappeared. and canals, railroad depots, houses and stores cover the ground. Some of the Western cities have had a more rapid growth than Pittsburgh, but the growth ultimate limit. On the contrary we believe, notwithstanding what croakers may say, that the population and business of the city will yet be doubled in about twenty years, and probably less. None of its resources exhibit any symptoms of exhaustion. Its advantages for the manufacture of iron and glass were never better, and the facilities for reaching wide and constantly increasing markets are multiplying all

Without claiming a prophetic gift we may venture to predict that in 1875 the two cities and seven or eight boroughs in sight of our canal tunnel used for connecting the eastern and western railroads; the Monongahela improvement extended into Virginia; the Ohio improved so that boats of four or five hundred tons can run all the year round; the Steubenville, the Chartiers Valley, the Pictsburgh and Cleveland, the Pittsburgh and Erie, the Allegueny Valley and Connelleville railroads all completed, so that trains of cars can leave here in the morning and severally reach Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Davenport, Dubuque, Milwaukie, Detroit, Bochester, Albany, New York, Baltimore, Washington, and all the intermediate cities on the same day. A Pittsburgher will then reach the interior of the great and populous free States of Kansas and Nebrasks in two days; Pittsburgh manufactures find profitable markets at the foot of the Rocky mountains; and Pittsburgh car and locomotive manufactories be engaged in filling contracts to stock the Atlantic and Pacific railroad. The floating coal boats will then have given place entirely to steam tugs and By that time, too, the smoke consumer will be in length. in general use, and the city enjoying a purer and more healthy atmosphere; the streets will be cleaner; stone and iron much used in building; a Know Something and do something will rule as Mayor; and boys will find no orchards to rob within two miles of Grant street. If any one doubts these predictions let him prove them incorrect if he can. The past and the present give promise of such a future. Old fogyism must get out of the way of "the good time coming."
