The idea which I wish to pronulgate is this: that in all cases where a person or persons have anything to sell, they are of hound to take the articles to the purchaser but the purchaser is bound to come to the grow r or manufacturer, as the case may be. This is not the manner of doing business in thi untry, and most particularly among the agri iltural portion of it. Nearly which are grown are taken by the farmer to the speculator and merchant, and sold for whatever hey see proper to give. Now, we think it quite a submission on the part of the farmer to do so; for it is reasonable to suppose that ar individual will not give the full value of an article if his exigencies do not require it. Bu ve do not think the purchaser much to blame for so doing, though we are confident the growe is criminal for making so much of a submission. As I am a follower of husbandry I sincerely aggression as well as of defence. They will the choice for passengers.
