The communication in another column entitled "Fusion and Confusion," should be read by our Democratic friends. It presents some views worthy of consideration at the present time on the subject of a fusion ticket. The writer is a Democrat of the old school, and has strong faith in Democracy while standing upon its own basis and contending for its own principles. A FARMER'S WAREHOUSE. A correspondent in Monday's Post suggests that the farmers and gardeners in the vicinity of our oity should join in opening one or two warehouses in convenient parts of the city, where farm and garden products could be left for sale at all times by faithful and competent agents. This would save much time. All sorts of vegetables, fruits, flowers, butter, eggs, and various other edibles, could be sent to the warehouses, and the producer be credited therefor, and to these warehouses consumers could resort, and find vegetables, fruits, &c., at all times, and at regular and not immoderate prices.

We have too many "middle men" between producers and consumers ; each one of whom must have a profit, and all those profits added to the original value keeps food at prices unnecessarily high. Consumers, must pay high prices, while the farmers and gardeners only get moderate prices after all. We need some plan by which food can come from the producers to the consumers by a shorter and more direct process. Would not "farmers' warehouses" accomplish that purpose ? While it would make food cheaper, it would pay farmers better by giving them the whole market price, less only the expenses of the warehouses. The open market does not answer the same purpose in as economical a way. Farmers must stand two or three days in a week in the market to sell small quantities of fruits, vegetables, butter &c. while it could be better done by agents or salesman at a common warehouse, and his time be saved for his work at home. A small commission for selling would meet the expenses of such a warehouse, where produce could be kept in a better state of preservation than in ready completed and in use we understand is already as if the supposed necessity of this was the open market; and where prices could preserve some degree of uniformity, and many frauds be prevented. Such warehouses would end to regulate prices throughout the Comberland will make it a good paying road :
