It is proposed to form an exclusive Southern party, and the proposition is received with favor in many parts of the South. It is by no means improbable that in 1856 we may have a Northern and Southern party in the field. But it is not likely that the democracy of the South will desert its standard. The late election in Virginia indicates that. It is far more likely that its strength will be increased, and that every Southern at late officers of the train been at their posts its life might have failed.
