So large a party as that was last year in Ohio cannot be sold in a day to Chase or Beward, or any other clique of aspiring politiclaus. There will be three parties in Ohio, and doubtless the same in Indiana and Illinois, There are thousands of Whige in all those States who will not consent to become abolitionists; and there are thousands of those who were ori ginally Democrats who will spurp the attempt to ransfer them so soon to the ranks of abolition yem. The process is too speedy, and success a sattainable. Outside of the Democratic party, in the States we have named, all is yet change. commetion, combination, secression, fusion and onefusion. But out of the chaotic and giant mass definite formations are beginning to ap pear; and it is evident that an American party and a Republican party will be the result. In New York some six or seven political State Conventions are called. But it is well understood that there will not be as many tickets nominated for the November election. An

Now, under such circumstances the duty of Democracy is perfectly apparent. THREE PARTIES.

There is a fair prospect now that throughout the Northern States there will be three parties in the field—even for the Fall elections. Things are now rapidly shaping themselves for such recult. In Onio it was supposed that there would be but two parties—the Democratic and the Republican. But the nomination of Chase was a perfect slaughter of the K. N's, and the great body of them seem resolved to abide by their own standard, and have a ticket of their own. On the 18th of this month they hold a State Convention to nominate such a ticket.

From all parts of the State we have evidence

Brate Convention to neminate such a ticker.

From all parts of the State we have evidence that they are thoroughly in earnest, and that the American party and its principles will not be surrendered. The anti-slavery sentiment is not the only one at work in Ohio outside the ranks of the Democracy; yet the Convention that nom instead Chase for Governor announced no other in the cause of a straight ticket he is determined that others shall suffer, too. After examining quite a number, and not liking the colors, she very innecently inquired if they had any of a "eub-junce of base of cops." The clerk was semewhat taken aback, but managed to stammer out, "No but we have some of an "enraged rat color." The lady left quickly.

There are two Ocurses of Study—one a Commercial, the other a Mathematical course.

There will be, harsafter, Quarterly Public Examinations, by a Board of Examiners, for the awarding of Diplomas. BOUN-KEEPING.—This beautiful art, so easy to acquire, so useful to every business man, and, as an avocation, far more lucrative than most trades are can be acquired in a few weeks—being taught here as it is taught no where else. Though every good tratise on this subject that can be lead is in the library of this College, for the free use of the students, still no one of them is exclusively followed, for the reason that the teacher of the art practices a mode of inculcating a knowledge of it which originated with himself, and whan both he and his pupils deem greatly superior to any laid down in books. WILLIAM HUNTER, DEALER EXCLUSIVELY IN which both he and his publis deem greatly superior to any laid down in books.

In Arthmetis, too the method of working used here (and have only) is not only far -arier to acquire, but it is also much shorter, plainer, and better adapted to general business, than can be nound in any treatise before the American public. It has been called, and not losapity, arithmetical magic, from the extraordinary facility with which true results are obtained with very little sparing.

In Writing, the chief aim is to impart to the student a bold, boautiful, rapidly execu ed hand, suited to Book-keeping, to corre-pondence, and to business generally.

It is the firm determination of the propietors of this College, that it shall not become second to any other of its flow of patronage which has so signally distinguished the career of this lastitution, from its commencement.
