> The James Adger Expedition. Owing to bad weather and, as the New -York Times statos, to an unseasonable time and to an i unsuitable vessel, the project of the construction of a submarine telegraph, which is to bring New York three days nearer to Europe than it is at present, has, for the present, miscarried. Af-ter continual difficulties, the Captain of the Sarah L. Bryant "had the wire cable (of which 40 of the 55 miles had already been laid) that was to connect Newfoundland with the United States, out, in order to save his own ship and the lives of the persons in her. It was done. All hope was then gone, and with the wire cable there was a very interesting group, in plaster, of two fomals figures. symbolizing England and who had spent so much money and time in an enterprise which was to be but a prelude to uniting the old world and the new." other's needs England holding a spear, and The construction of this Su marino line, says France a sword; this group was placed in the midst of flowers. At the corners of the Made-the N. Y. Times, designed immediately to bring whiles of nowers. At the corners of the Made-leine, clumps of English and French flags were raised.
