

falling, the falsehood falls with it. Mr. I shall vote to lay the proposition, and all the proposed amendments on the table, I will vote for the motion.

The Van Buren party Press is very industrious in raising reports calculated to throw odium on Messrs. Graves and Wise. One paper denounces the affair as a murder perpetrated by the hired ruffians of the bank, another says that it is difficult to conceive how these gentlemen can hold up their heads in Congress; a third report that Mr. Cilley was furnished with a Rifle that would not carry a ball 80 yards without being spent &c. &c. all inventions for party purposes. We copy the following however to show how far Mr. Cilley was actuated by a desire to take away the life of his adversary.

Washington, March 1st, 1838. On the first exchange of shots, Mr. Cilley fired between the words "one" and "two," and Mr. Graves between the words "two" and "three," or just after the word two was pronounced. On the second exchange of shots, the rifle of Mr. Graves was discharged when in the act of raising it to his shoulder, and between the words "fire" and "one." Consequently this shot was literally thrown away. Here then, Mr. Cilley had an opportunity of at once bringing the contest to a close by refusing to fire, or by firing in the air. Did he not? Far from it. Knowing as he did, that his own life was in danger, he boldly and deliberately took this aim at Mr. Graves—who stood erect and unmoved—and shot him. Mr. Cilley was apparently certain of his victim, and fired the word "three" and to the astonishment of all parties, Mr. Graves escaped unhurt! One of the persons present remarked to me, that the time between the going off of Mr. Graves' rifle and the firing by Mr. Cilley, appeared to him an age—he considered the death of Mr. Graves inevitable; and considering the expertise of Mr. Cilley with the rifle, nothing but the interposition of Providence could have saved him.

I repeat these facts well known here, for the truth of which I appeal to all who were on the ground; and most assuredly, no man of ordinary intelligence and of common fairness, can under these circumstances, give credence to the idea that Mr. Cilley sought not the life of Mr. Graves, or desired to terminate the affair without bloodshed. If the committee of the House should proceed in their investigations, these facts will be abundantly substantiated. Yours, &c. J.

Tremendous Disclosure.—A writer in the Madisonian, the conservative paper at Washington city, declares, that the Treasury, which had a surplus in it of $40,000,000, when Martin Van Buren was elected President, is now bankrupt to the amount of five or six millions of dollars, and that the receipts into the Treasury will fall short of the expenditures for the current year from FIFTEEN TO TWENTY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, which will have to be raised by a loan, or Treasury drafts issued for this amount, which is the same as a loan. The writer concludes as follows:

Many may startle, and attempt to cavil at this exposition. That will not change the facts.—It will prove to be true. It is time the country should be made acquainted with the true state of its finances. A war of extermination is now waged against all the sources of wealth, and upon credit and the government with a BANKRUPT TREASURY! The only means possessed by the government, or to what it can resort to supply its wants is, its own credit.—Warring against credit and at the same time depending entirely upon credit, for the means of defraying the expenses of conducting the government. This is the picture which we now present to the nation and the world.

I think it a high time that Congress should take into its own hands the management of the public finances, or take their management out of the hands of the present incumbent of the Treasury Department, whose administration of its affairs, has been characterized from first to last by a succession of blunders, more fatal in their effects, upon the country and its great interests, than would follow even war, pestilence and famine. Roberts, price $2 per annum. Persons wishing to procure either of the above excellent publications for the ensuing year, are requested to leave their names at this office.

A Farmer in this neighborhood, who is a subscriber to the above publications, stated to us, a short time since, that the information he derived from these works, enabled him to save upwards of one hundred dollars in one year in tending his farm alone, and it yielded better crops than when tilled in the old fashion way.

LESLIE'S CATHARTIC Elix., has been appointed a Justice of the Peace for Manheim township, Schuylkill County. David R. Porter, the Van Buren candidate for Governor, is an open and avowed advocate of the Sub-Treasury System.

In Senate, March 5th, Mr. Finley reported a Bill relative to the burial ground in Pottsville.

The Banks in New York have resolved to resume specie payments on or before the 10th day of May next.

We occasionally serve our readers with some of the beauties of the Van Buren press; for their edification; we will now give them a specimen of "the ravings of the Van Buren press:"

From the Albany Argus. "If in the depths of deep political damnation, there is a depth still more profound, that is the next place to which the Secular Tailorage ought to be elected." Mr. Tallmadge alluded to is the Conservative Senator from the State of New York.

The Senate of the United States decided on Wednesday last, by a vote of 29 to 23, not to postpone the Sub-Treasury Bill. The question is now on Mr. Rives' Substitute.

The Difference.—The receipts of toll on the New York canal since the year 1837, fell short of the receipts in the previous year, 1836, $317,216, while the receipts of toll on the Pennsylvania canal, in the year 1837, exceeded the receipts of the previous year, 1836, by $137,644. New York has a time-serving party mas for Governor, who has legislated for the party alone, while Pennsylvania has an independent Chief Magistrate, who has legislated for the whole state, without regard to party.

New Hampshire.—The election for Governor &c. will take place in New Hampshire on Tuesday next, the 13th inst. Judging from the papers, it will be the most spirited election held in that state for several years past. In the city of Portsmouth, the Whigs have determined to close their places of business on that day, and devote their whole time, to the service of the country. Should this state go against Mr. Van Buren, we believe, that in nine months hence there will not be found a single state in the Union supporting this wicked and doomed administration.

Miller, the murderer of Hoffman, the pedlar, who is now confined in the Lycoming jail, has confessed his cold-blooded murder. Although he attempted to implicate young Falkner as an accomplice, he afterwards acknowledged that no one participated in the act but himself. The body of the unfortunate man has been found, and has been decently interred by the citizens of Williamsport. Miller's trial (if a trial be necessary) will take place in May next.—Millonian.

FROM WASHINGTON. Washington City, March 5th, 1838. In the Senate, Mr. Merrick of Maryland has had the floor all day, in opposing the Sub Treasury bill.

Mr. Norvell of Michigan, is entitled to the floor to-morrow. In the House of Representatives, the day was devoted to resolutions and petitions. Nothing of interest transpired.

Mr. John Quincy Adams presented a petition from sundry citizens of Rocky Mount, Franklin County, Virginia, praying Congress to expel him, Mr. Adams, for the part he has taken in advocating the right of petition. The petitioners claimed that they were also advocates of that right, and for that reason they asked him to present their memorial.

Mr. Rencher said that he would raise the question of reception on the paper; but, as Mr. Adams insisted that it was conceded in respectful language, and ought to be received, Mr. Rencher withdrew his motion, and the petition was received.

Mr. Mallory moved that it do lie on the table, which motion was carried.

The paper was as but a bad imitation of the slave petition Mr. Adams received the last year, and was as flat as stupid.

Mr. Davis, of Pennsylvania, presented a joint resolution, designating the 14th of May, for a day of adjournment. It was laid on the table.

I do not know who Mr. Davis is, nor do I know what may be his political predilections, but as one of the American people, I thank him for his design. Unless Congress can go ahead faster than it does now—unless it can avoid personal collisions, the sooner it adjourns, the better will it be for the people. As yet but two public bills only have been passed, and we are rapidly approaching the month of April.

Her Britannic Majesty's frigate arrived in Hampton Roads, yesterday, bringing Lord Page, bearer of despatches to Mr. Fox. Her Majesty's Minister near the Court of Washington.

It is rumored or guessed, that these despatches are important, and may lead to the recall of Mr. Fox. Treacher doubt any such issue. England has, however, much cause of complaint.

It is not unlikely that we may have a message from the President, in relation to the mission of the frigate.

FROM THE FRONTIER. Office of the St. Alban's (Vermont) Messenger, Thursday evening, March 1. THE PATRIOT ARMY DISBANDED. The patriots have been collecting for several days past on a small island, east of Albany, and other places near the line. Yesterday they left their encampment, passed over to Albany, and crossed the line at Caldwell's Mill, under the command of Drs. Nelson and Cole, and camped for the night about two miles from the line.

This morning upon organizing their forces, they became convinced that they could not stand against the Royal forces that were marching against them. This morning, previous to disbanding, they received intelligence of the defeat of Mackenzie and Van Rensselaer.

They therefore came to the conclusion that "disunion was the better part of valor," and delivered up their arms to Gen. Wool, who met them at the line and received them, including two field pieces. The number who laid down their arms was about two hundred and fifty. The whole amount of their forces was probably about four hundred.

Dr. Nelson and Cole have just arrived here in the custody of Gen. Wool. LATE FROM EUROPE. Accidents of the dispersion of the insurgents in Lower Canada and of Mackenzie's failure and rout in Upper Canada, had reached London. Of the assistance at Navy Island, they have not yet heard. The London press generally speak favorably of the course pursued by the Federal government. A meeting of the violent radicals was held at the Crown and Anchor, tavern, headed by Hume and Rockwell, when resolutions were passed favorable to the pretensions of the insurgents.—This evidently however meets no response in the public mind or in the course of the government, whose military preparations are on a scale of great magnitude.

Parliament were to assemble on the 15th of January, but it was understood that no important business would be brought forward before the 8th of February.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF THE ROYAL EXCHANGE BY FIRE.

London, January 11. An event which may be regarded almost as a national calamity occurred last night—the Royal Exchange is a heap of ruins, a destructive fire has laid waste this extensive commercial building, one of the most magnificent in Europe.—Soon after ten o'clock last night, the fire broke out in Lloyd's coffee room, at the northeast corner of the edifice, opposite the Bank. It was first discovered by one of the Bank watchmen, who gave the alarm at the gates, and the Bank engines were immediately brought. A strong party of the city police and night watchmen, with the aid of duty in the Bank, immediately repaired to the spot, and expresses were sent to the fire engine station, at which period no signs of fire could be seen in the street. Considerable difficulty was experienced in obtaining entrance to the building; but when this was accomplished the flames burst through the windows with great fury, and drove the people back. An extraordinary scene ensued: the whole neighborhood was alarmed, and the tradesmen who hold the small shops around the exterior of the building instantly commenced the removal of their goods. It was at once predicted that the whole building would be destroyed, and this foreboding was realized too correctly.—The Jefferson square, Whitecross street, Farringdon street, Schoolhouse lane, and Wellclose square engines, with those belonging to the West of England, the country office, &c. were all on the spot, with sixty-three of the fire brigade men, within an hour after the fire broke out. Before any water could be thrown on the building, it was necessary to throw the hose and works of the engines by pouring hot water into them, and this caused some delay. For some time afterwards, owing to the intense frost, there was great difficulty in working the engines, and the first continued extending in a southwest direction, consuming the whole of the long range of offices belonging to the Royal Exchange Assurance Company.

At twelve o'clock these and Lloyd's establishment, the coffee room, the captain's room, and the offices of the underwriters, presented one body of flame, which shot up to a great height, illuminating the Bank, St. Bartholomew's, St. Michael's, St. Mary's churches. Every object was as visible as at noonday, and the people had assembled in such large numbers, that the military and police were fully occupied in keeping them beyond the reach of danger, which was very great, owing to the large quantities of burning timber falling every minute into the street. As this time it was found necessary to clear the interior of the signs of the Exchange of the people collected there, owing to the density of the smoke and the rapid progress of the fire, but many could not be induced to leave the covered walks until they were half suffocated, and not a few were expelled by force for their own safety.—The gates had been forced open at the commencement of the fire.

At one o'clock, the north and west sides of the Exchange was consumed, and the fire was rapidly approaching the new tower, which was erected about 20 years ago. The efforts of the firemen appeared not to have the least effect; the flames extended rapidly over the building, although not less than twenty engines were at work; indeed, for what good they seemed to do, they might as well have been unemployed.

At two o'clock the flames reached the tower, and the terror and excitement of the assembled multitudes in Cornhill, Mansion-house street, and Fenchurch street, were extreme. A thousand voices murmured "It has reached the tower, it's all over." The appearance of the frightful conflagration at this period was awful in the extreme; the whole of the Exchange was completely enveloped in flames, and the heat was so great that the firemen and auxiliaries could scarcely pursue their labors near the burning mass.

The splendid tower, nearly 150 feet in height, was reduced to ashes, the musical peal of eight bells with a tenor about 18 cwt fell into the street, every carrying away every thing in their progress towards the pavement, including the roof and stone work, and the arch over the centre entrance. The clock had a very singular effect while the tower was burning, which was no doubt visible at a considerable distance. The points of the dials became red hot, and the hands pointed to the hour, twenty five minutes past one, when the works took fire, melting the chime bells and the machinery in a few minutes.

The Royal Exchange is stated to be insured for $25,000 in one establishment. It is said the building cannot be replaced for less than £150,000. One account states the safety-valves under the exchange, which are now covered with immense heaps of ruins, and which contain the account books and other valuable property belonging to the London bankers, it was hoped had escaped danger, but unfortunately, we learn that there was not less than four feet of water in them, which was being pumped out as fast as circumstances would permit.

DIED. In this borough on Wednesday night last, MARY JANE, daughter of George and Maria Patterson, in the 7th year of her age. The friends and acquaintances of the family, are requested to attend the funeral, this day, at 2 o'clock, P. M., without further notice.

On Saturday, the 25th of January last, about noon, at Rose Hill, the residence of his father, near Rockville, Maryland, the Rev. T. J. ADDISON MINES, after a protracted illness. In the death of this gentleman, the Presbyterian Church has lost one of her ministers: he was highly esteemed by his brethren and those who knew him as possessing no ordinary talents, especially for the pulpit, which he loved to exercise in the service of his Lord and Master. In the illness which terminated his earthly career, he exhibited the spirit and temper of the Christian in his patience and happy submission to the Divine will.

Mr. Mines possessed a cheerful, affectionate, confiding heart, and an open, generous disposition; he has left a large circle of acquaintances, in the ministry and in the Church, who will long cherish his memory.
