

executed. There would without this order, no doubt have been suffering and distress, but the Banks had thought would not have been compelled to suspend specie payments.

The paper circulation between the United States and Great Britain was the next topic discussed by Mr. Webster. The difference between the two countries, and the causes of this difference, were stated at length, and with great ability. Mr. Webster proved that we had been two fold more rigid and severe in our dealings with Banks and money institutions, and had suffered two fold evil for so doing. In our intercourse with the Banks the interest of the Banks is as 100 to a 1000. The interest of the people in the Banks is as 5000 to 1000. The Banks benefited the country as much as the country benefited the Banks. Between the People and the Banks, the favor shown to the People was as four to one. The cry against the Banks was a rhapsody, unmeaning and erroneous—but but for effect.

Mr. Webster then came to the Bill before the Senate, and said he should consider it, first, as to its mode of keeping or guarding the Public Money; and secondly in reference to its effects upon the community. Mr. Webster asked if the bill was to be succeeded by other measures? Was the bill intended to do away with all paper circulation? Was it intended to have a gold and silver circulation exclusively? Mr. Webster thought not, and yet that was the out-door clamor. Down with the Banks—down with the 700 little money makers, and an exclusive specie payment to be legalized. I will venture the prediction, said Mr. Webster, let such a measure be authorized to-morrow morning, and your bill to go into operation to-morrow evening there will be 300 private banks in the community. Every broker will become a banker—every body will bank, and people will do among themselves what the Government will not allow to be done.

In four and twenty hours, said Mr. Webster, we should go back three hundred years to the old Bank Hamburg—making of this retrogressive motion in the brief space of one day. Speaking further of the impracticability of this bill, and the payment of specie, Mr. Webster said that the daily payments made in the City of New York from Bank to Bank, and from the People to the Banks, and from the Banks to the People, was not less than $80,000,000, and that of the whole country put less than $250,000,000 and this is carried on in specie? How could it be done and how can it be done? Impossible.

The effects of this Bill formed another prominent part of Mr. Webster's speech. The tax payer was to count out his specie to the receiver—the receiver to distribute the disbursements to depositors—and depositors to disburse the $30,000,000 received for the revenue must be counted five times, or to the amount of $150,000,000—and thus we were to become a tinkling, jingling generation of men—a nation of bell-ringers—symbol-tinkers—a hard money government.

Its effect on the business and commerce of the country will be that $21,000,000 will always on an average, and the operations of this Bill, be hoarded and kept for public use. You cannot resume specie payments—never—never—I am willing to risk my reputation upon this assertion. You can never resume specie payments and continue the resumption, unless you contract almost all the issues necessary for the business of the community. Business could not go on, and the beginning would end in another suspension. The effect was inevitable and undeniable. Contractions must be made, to a ruinous extent under this Bill, and the country distressed and destroyed.

The constitutional question formed the next subject of Mr. Webster's speech, and this was followed by an eloquent and powerful reply in answer to Mr. Calhoun. Mr. Webster began with the beginning, and took Mr. Calhoun up where Mr. Calhoun had left him. Mr. Webster read extracts from Mr. Calhoun's speeches, proving that he had changed his policy on constitutional questions, and directly denied now what he had directly asserted years ago by. "The powers of Congress was another part of Mr. Webster's answer to Mr. Calhoun. Here, too, Mr. W. moved from written and printed testimony that he asserted now what he had before denied, and denied now what he had before asserted.

[I must close my report here, without giving you the close of Mr. Webster's speech. The leaving of your special messenger compels me to close where I am.]

—The Madisonian says, that, in sixty days, the amount of treasury notes authorized by Congress to be issued, ($10,000,000), will be entirely exhausted, and the wheels of the Government brought to an absolute stop, unless some new and sudden means be discovered to replenish the Treasury. An additional debt must be incurred—and more irredeemable paper, that worst form a currency can assume, is to be poured into the market. Set that down too, to the credit of the "experimenters" and "expedients" of the Government.

TERRIBLE SHIPWRECK.

We have read with much interest, in the Cork Constitution of the 27th of January, lent to us by a friend, an account of the wreck of the steamer Killarney, in Ireland by which twenty-nine persons lost their lives.

There were on the deck of the vessel 650 hogs, and when the storm raged with violence, it was thought necessary to throw these animals into the sea, but it was found impossible to get them overboard. A wave, however, subsequently swept the deck, carried off several of the crew, and very one of the hogs, taking with them the hulks.

A part of the crew and passengers, after the boat went to pieces, got on a rock, hence several of them were swept by the waves, or fell after being chilled by the wind and water.

One poor fellow, Michael Sheenan, lost his life in giving up his right of an early escape to a lady. One sailor, an Irishman, a woman who was entirely insensible, and slipped along a rope stretched from the wreck to the rock, and thus saved herself and her.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawe were kneeling upon the deck, embracing each other in fervent prayer, when they were swept away.—A scene must have been fearfully appalling.

A CHILD IN SEARCH OF HER FATHER.

BY MRS. SPIDGNEY.

There was I was but four years old,
When Father went away,
Yet I have never seen his face,
Since that sad parting day.
He went, where brighter fountains grow,
Beneath Virginia skies,
Dear Teacher, show me on your map,
Where that far country lies.

I begged him, "Father do not go!
For since my mother died—
I love no one so well as you"—
And clinging to his side,
The tears came gushing down my cheeks
Until my eyes were dim;
Some were in sorrow for the dead,
And some in love for him.

He knelt, and prayed of God above,
"Oh little daughter spare,
And till we both shall meet again,
Oh keep her in thy care."
He does not come!—I watch for him,
At evening's twilight grey,
Till every shadow wears his shape,
Along the grassy way.

I muse, and listen all alone,
When stormy winds are high,
And think I hear his tender tone,
And call, but no reply.
And so I've done these four long years,
Within a lonely home,
Yet every dream of hope is vain—
Why don't my father come!

Father, dear father, are you sick
Upon a stranger shore?
Grandmother says it must be so,—
O write to us once more,
And let your little daughter come,
To smooth your restless bed,
And hold the cordial to your lips,
And press your aching head.

Alas!—I fear that he is dead,
Who will my trouble share?
O, tell me where his form is laid,
And let me travel there!
By mother's tomb I love to sit,
Where her green branches wave,
Good people!—help an orphan child
To find her father's grave.

FOR THE MINERS' JOURNAL.

A mother's appeal!—"Heedless, rambling impulse" itself must have paused, and must have "thought" too, while reading the mother's appeal, published in the Journal of the 10th inst.

I wish it could be said that similar cases were not frequent in and around our borough; at least one such has been heard of within a short month, wherein the wife has been as unsuccessful with dealers, as the mother was in the other case.

Now I intend to write no homily on the subject, but merely quote a postscript to a communication published some time ago over a well known signature, in the hope it may be profitable. "Since writing the above, I have learned that a poor woman went to a neighboring grog-shop, and requested the dealer not to sell any more rum to her husband, as it sometimes rendered him a madman. A few days afterwards, in a rum excited frenzy, he plunged the knife into her throat. She stayed the blood with her hand, and ran to the shop, and there poured out her life-stream at the feet of the wretch who had just pocketed the price of her blood. With this blood, I seal this communication; and if more blood flows before another week, I will use it in sealing another communication—and another—AND ANOTHER—AND ANOTHER, till death stills my pen."

Flour is selling in Pittsburgh at $4.75 per barrel—and pork at 54 cents per lb.

The Canadian Prisoners.—A writer in the Toronto Palladium, a government paper, speaking of the condition of the prisoners confined on political charges in the jail of Toronto says—"Many of them are literally being consumed with vermin, and all are fast verging towards the extremity of filth." The writer recommends "a penny's worth of sugar loaf" for "every twenty" as a relief for their miseries. Wages of opinion that emptying the dungeons would be found much more beneficial.

"A sleigh load of prisoners" was brought into Kingston on the 23d ult. from some of the townships in the rear of that city.

In all the efforts of the Van Buren men to give a political coloring to the late duel at Washington, and to express a holy horror at duelling, they forget the number in which their dear friend, the General, was engaged, and how they defended them. This is the age of hypocrisy.—N. Y. Star.

Mr. Cilley's District.—It is said that Governor Kent has ordered a new election for member of Congress in the 12th district, to supply the place of Mr. Cilley, on the first Monday of April next.

Newspapers in Kentucky.—The Louisville Gazette states that there are in Kentucky thirty-one newspapers. Sixteen are Whigs; six Van Buren; six neutral; one Agricultural, and two Religious. About one fourth of this number are published in Louisville.

THE NEW YORK SPRING ELECTIONS.

The Albany evening Journal of Saturday last, is almost wholly occupied with details of the victories achieved by the Whigs throughout that State, at the recent Town elections. These details are far more gratifying than our most sanguine friends could have anticipated. Advertising to them, the Journal says:

"Truth is mighty and will prevail.—The result of the March Elections gives abundant and grateful assurance that the power of truth is prevailing over falsehood, profligacy, oppression and misrule. On no former occasion have we had such tremendous and overwhelming demonstrations of popular indignation against the Administration. The People have determined no longer to endure oppression—no longer to tolerate their oppressors. Never since the disastrous reign of Jackson commenced, have the people shown such a resolute determination to assert their rights. Towns and counties heretofore devoted to the Regency, have now indignantly spurned Loco Focoism. The voice of thunder in which the freemen of Schoharie, Otsego, Chenango, Oswego and Jefferson, have spoken, must appal the office holders! In each of these counties and for the first time, there is a Whig Board of Supervisors!"

Notice to Contractors.
James River and Kanawha Improvement.

PROPOSALS will be received at the office of the Company, in the City of Richmond, up to the 9th day of April, next, for the construction of all the firm bridges between Richmond and Maiden's Adventure, and the dams across James River, situated respectively at the mouth of Tye River, Joshua's Falls, and Seven Islands. The two first of the above named dams will be about 500 feet long, and about 14 feet high. The foundations are of rock.

The depth of water in the summer season is generally from one to four feet deep. The contractors will be required, by the terms of their agreements, to complete the dams in the course of the next summer and fall, and with a view to this object, proposals are only invited from men who have the necessary skill and ability to accomplish the labor.

The wooden guard locks at the sites of the Tye River and Joshua's Falls dams, will be offered for contract at the same time.

The plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the subscriber in this city.

INTERESTING CASE.
DYSPEPSIA & HYPOCHONDRIASIS.

Mrs. ALICE G. KENNY, No. 115 Louis street, between Stanton and Houston streets, afflicted for ten years with the following distressing symptoms:

Acid eructation, daily spasmodic pains in the head, loss of appetite, palpitation of the heart, giddiness and dimness of sight, could not lie on her right side, or on her left, and was unable to engage in any thing that demanded vigor or courage, sometimes a visionary idea of an aggravation of her disease, a whimsical aversion to particular persons and places, groundless apprehensions of personal danger and poverty, an irascibility and weariness of life, discontented, disquietude on every slight occasion, she conceived the gold medal of the last war, the receipt, lamented, and thought she had a most miserable life, never was one so bad, with frequent mental hallucinations. Mrs. Kenny had the advice of several eminent physicians, and had recourse to numerous medicines, but could not obtain even a temporary alleviation of her distressing state, till her husband persuaded her to make trial of my mode of treatment. She is now quite relieved, and finds herself not only capable of attending to her domestic affairs, but avows that she enjoys as good health at present as she did at any period of her existence.

Husband of the foregoing Alice Kenny. Sworn before me this 14th day of Dec. 1836. Peter Pinckney, Com. of Deeds
