Mr. Allen, after some remarks in relation to his proposition respecting the banks in the District of Columbia, said, that he congratulated the country upon the principles avowed by the Senator from Kentucky. He believed that nearly all the evils arising out of the banking system, was to be ascribed to the secresy in which their transactions had been enveloped. All the people asked was an honest and frank disclosure. The announcement of this principle, from a source so high, he considered a new era in banking. He said he could not go with the Senator for a Bank: but he rejoiced, that if there was to be a bank, we were to have no more mystery, at least so far as that honorable gentleman (Mr. Clay) was concerned.

Mr. Buchanan said, we have now the fact plainly presented, that the old bank is to be abandoned, and a new bank to be chartered, and located in the city of New York. I protest said he, against a new bank in the city of New York. It would render every other city tributary. It would be a blighting mildew upon every city in the Union. He was opposed, he said, to any and every bank of the United States; but if this curse must be inflicted upon the country, he was for having it located in Philadelphia. There never was, he contended, such a stride towards consolidation, as the proposition of the Senator from Kentucky. Nothing had been said, however, by that honorable gentleman (Mr. Clay) as to the amount of specie that should be required for the redemption of their paper. He wished to hear something on that point. I am glad, said he, that the Senator has boldly brought forward his measure before the country. The issue is now between the old and the new bank that is to be established.

Mr. Clay said that he had offered no proposition to the Senate. He was surprised at the gratuitous assumption of the honorable gentleman. He says that there is to be a new bank established in the city of New York. He (Mr. Clay) had suggested no such idea. He had presented no plan. He was not for arguing a cause before a packed jury. Knowing the settled opinion of the Senate on the subject of a bank, he had no intention of offering any plan. His sole object was, to let the country know his general views. Nor had he decided in his own mind, as to the proper location. Whether Charleston, Richmond, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York or Boston, was the most suitable place. Mr Clay reiterated that he went for a bank; and the charge that he wished it to be under the management of any particular individual was unfounded.

In respect to the amount of specie to be required, he said the details of a bill would provide for that. He had voted, in the case of the district banks, that they should hold one specie dollar for every three dollars of paper that they issued. This may be a proper limit. It may not. But, said he, I will go as far as any man in guarding against an over issue of paper, which may result in a stoppage of specie payments. One of the greatest curses that can befal the country is an irredeemable paper medium, whether issued by the Government or by banks.

After some further desultory remarks by Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Clay, the petition was laid on the table.

The Senate then took up the bill in relation to extending the charter of the banks in the District of Columbia, which bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading. It extends their charter for two years. And then the Senate adjourned.

Until 2 o'clock the House of Representatives was occupied in receiving petitions and resolutions; among the former was a memorial presented by Mr. Adams, of sundry citizens of Goochland, Va., praying the expulsion of John Q Adams as a nuisance. It was laid on the table.

The House then went into a Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, when there was some difficulty in obtaining a quorum; but at length, about 130 members being found within the bar, the Indian Hostillity Appropriation Bill was taken up and some progress made therein, and then the Committee rose, and after some time the House adjourned.

AN OBSERVER.

Correspondence of the Enquirer and Courier.

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1838.

At the close of the morning hour, a message was received from the President of the U. S. accompanied by a long letter from the Secretary of War, which proposed in substance the opening of new arrangements with the Cherokee Indians.—It virtually acknowledges that the Schimmerthorn Treaty, of 1835, was obtained by fraud, and tacitly sanctions the idea of a new treaty. The appearance of the document created great sensation, and led to many sage and gave suggestions in reference to the ultimate fate of the Cherokees.

It was moved that it be referred to the committee of the whole, and to the committee on Indian affairs. These motions created a spirited debate, and led to scenes of strong feeling and embarrassment.

The message was finally referred to the committee of the whole house. To-morrow is the day for the Cherokees to be off. Scott is authorised to forbear, till he gets further orders from washington.

Washington Correspondence of the New York American.

Some idea may be formed of the retarded state of Congressional business, from the fact, that in the House upwards of seven hundred private bills came up as the order of the day on Friday last. One hundred and fifteen public bills remain dormant in Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, most of which demand immediate action, and are of the greatest importance.

It is the general impression, that the present session will close on or before the 4th of July, so that we have now but about seven weeks to debate and decide on some of the most critical measures that ever claimed the attention of our National Legislature. If we may judge from the past and present state of party feeling, we are not warranted in expecting much from the short period that remains.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

The New York Banks now redeem their notes in specie. The Philadelphia banks pay all sums under one dollar in specie. The banks in this town, and we believe the banks generally throughout the State, do the same.

If a resolution or law similar to that proposed to the United States Senate by Mr. Clay, were passed by Congress, compelling the government to cease its persecution of the banks and receive the paper of solvent specie-paying institutions in payment of the public dues, a general resumption throughout the whole union would take place immediately, and business resume its wonted channels. But under the present state of things—the domestic exchanges deranged and the government not only witholding relief but increasing the evils of the times, which its mad policy has involved us in—we do not know when the banks of the south, southwest and west, will be able to resume. Perhaps the Virginia and Mississippi elections may have some effect in opening the eyes and changing the policy of Van Buren & Co.

We learn that a late arrival from England brought $750,000 in specie to New York. Two millions of dollars in specie were sent from New York to the Pennsylvania United States Bank a few days since: that institution now has upwards of five millions in coin.

It is now to be hoped—indeed expected—that the banks in Pennsylvania will proceed as soon as possible to the redemption of five dollar notes in specie, and thus banish the abominable small note currency.

One fact is worthy of notice: notwithstanding the attacks of the Locofocos on the banks of the country, and their consequent suspension of specie payments, those institutions (and especially those of Pennsylvania) stand much higher in the confidence of the public than they did three years ago.

And further: the WHIG BANNER, as is well remarked by the Baltimore Patriot, NOW WAVES IN TRIUMPH THROUGHOUT THE UNION; and what is the consequence? Business is reviving, confidence is reviving, and the much-wished-for RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS IS COMMENCING: And at the same time Van Buren and his unworthy associates, having wasted the substance of the government, are imploring congress for supplies, and begging leave to issue TEN MILLIONS MORE OF THE IRREDEEMABLE TREASURY SHINPLASTERS!!! Let these facts be remembered. —Penn. Intelligencer.

The present school fund of Connecticut, exclusive of wild lands, is over ten millions, yielding $1,20 to every child in the state.

There appears to be an unwillingness on the part of Congress to pass a law regulating steam vessels, for which we are totally at a loss how to account. Scarcely a week, we had almost said a day, elapses that does not bring with it accounts of the most heart rending character of disasters involving human life, arising from explosions of steam engine, and yet the chief council of the nation continues to look on as unmoved as if the sufferers were so many squirrels or wild pigeons. To some the subject may appear of too small importance to occupy the consideration of so enlightened a body as Congress, but certainly in a country the population of which is so migratory, the safety of wayfarers is of primary importance. Unluckily the adoption of steam boats as the general means of conveyance, while it has introduced much comfort, has brought a serious evil in causing other modes of travelling to be disused, and preventing highways from being constructed and kept in repair.—Were it otherwise, there is no doubt that in the present state of public feeling, had they the opportunity of travelling with ordinary comfort on land, three fourths of travellers would take coaches. As for any doubt that may be conjured up in regard to the power of Congress to legislate in the premises, it appears to us rather a subterfuge than an opinion deliberately formed and seriously entertained. Let a law be framed so as to guard the public safety, and, we will answer for it, so far as the jurisdiction of Congress is concerned.
