CAUTION TO BANKS.

"Yesterday the Loco Focos made a point at stumping the friends of Ritner by the offer of a large bet, consisting of money sent by a bank in Reading to one of the banks in this place. The circumstances of thetaffair are these.

-"A young man named Boxs, a Teller in the bank at Reading, arrived in town with 20,000 dollars, to be delivered to one of our banks. The Loco Focus here finding out that he had the money, one or them got it and proceeded, in company with others to Wilson's Hotel, where they bantered to bet 20,000 dollars on the election of Porter. Mr. Wilson offered to take 10,-000 dollars, or the whole, by posting up 3.000 dollars as a forfeit; but the Locus would take nothing less than the whole a mount, and that all to be posted immediately, and then instantly left, making a great noise. This information going out we understand that arrangements were immediately made to take the hanter, but the gentleman from Reading was not to be Banks should be careful whom they despatch as messengers tilthough the country with money in these days of Loco Foco rabidity, as a precipitate retreat was all that eaved the one above mentioned from from disgrace, or the bank from bass."

We learn from Reading that the Young Man with whom the money was sent, is not to blame in the transaction. further than entrusting the same to a second person. He had no knowledge of the use made of the money until he saw the transaction in the Paper. - ED, M. J.]

We copy the following items from the last number of that excellent publication, the "Journal of the Franklin In-titute." The directions for the use of "the Davy Lamp," will be of importance to the Miners in this neighborhood, where the Dain mining operations, particularly in the collieries below the water level:

THE DAVY LAMP.

The following directions are given to miners in the use of their great protector, the lamp inven-ted by Sir Humphrey Dave:—When ever your gauzu is a coming to a cherry-red heat, be care ful, and do not remain long, unless your tusiness be exceedingly pressing; and, even then, your lamp must be changed, and that very often, and carefully. Caution is exceedingly requisite in moving it out to get cooled and exchanged. Have no oil on the gauze, nor have any defect in it. The above is an extreme case, in which the great. 'est care is needfal. When you are travelling you should not allow the gauze to attain this heat; but should, on the approach to it, :elura into other air. You should often care ully examine your lamp, and then you will have timely notice of the approach of such asagemus circumstances You will perceive first a high coloured spire on the flame; and that will be succeeded by a long one, even reaching to the top of the lamp, and then this will expand, or become larger, until your lamp soon becomes insufferably hot, and then specify comes the cherry red hear then there is great danger. Observe, through all these tran utions, even from the first appearance of the blue coloured spire to the last, there is danger in exposing the naked flame. As soon as you see the hing spiry pillar, it would be well often carefully to change the lamp. In little more than sixty years, the manufacture of this article in Britain has increased about 25,000 to about one million of tons per annum, and in case the cost of production be reduced one half, it is impossible to estimate the luture rate of increase; and surely the reduction in the con-aumption of coal from 73 loan for one ton of iron, to less than 1 tons, warrants the antecipation that it will be great. As, however, some of these modern improvements seem to ppen the way for the manufacture of iron in America, it behoves our legislature to allow the Americans to find a market at latraterms for the produce of their soil in this country, and then many generations may pass away before they can interfere with us in the iron manufacture. If the railway once be extend. ed through the west of Cumberland, the excellen cy, the abundance, and proximity of the materi als for the manufacture of from can hardly fall to plant some important branch of the iron manufacture on our coast.—Whitehopen Herald.
