Official Meanness !- Several of the Whig papers at New York and elsewhere did not receive the President's message my the Expresses sent for the good of the people, by private Institutions. This is on a parity with all the proceedings of the Department, where self seems to reign omnipotent.

Correction.-In our last we stated that the fire in Market Street originated on the premises of Mr. Womelsdorf. We are desired to correct this, as it appears the disaster occurred from defect in the connection of a stove pipe and flue in the stere of Mr. Cramer.

The First Assembly .- On Thursday Evening the first assembly of the season took place, and passed off with an eclat highly creditable to the exertions of the managers; although but a short notice was given to our ladies for the preparation of flounces and furbelows, still they shone out in beauty, and in strength of numbers.-Were it not for the envious proceedings of dur politicians, who occupy so large a portion of our columns, we would heeded not the desolation they might bring upon attempt a description. But as it is the dashing bello, and the blushing bride—the blooming matron, sweet in her wedded charms, and the gentlemen, redolent of white gloves and morroccu pumps, must be content to be noticed in "one fell swoop." We have a dainty spirit at our call, who will attend the next assembly, and give us a chapter on dancing and dress, which we trust will be more than acceptable to our fair readers.

The young bachelor gentlemen have relieved themselves from our anathema, and their expedition in affording the means of amusement to the ladies, entitles them to their best wishes, and therefore Messrs. Managers, in their names we tender you their thanks with all the accompanimente. &cc. &cc.

ALTERATION IN THE CONSTITUTION The New York Times says-"The memorial to the legislature of the state, to have the consti-tution of the United States amended in such man ner as to have the Secretary of the Treasury, &c.
and the Post Master General sleeted by Congress, will be presented for signatures at the Mechanics' and Merchants' Exchange his day, when it is hoped that our citizens generally will sign it."

Most cordially do we coıncide with this application, for we differ in toto from our President, who thinks the farther the power is removed from the people the better. We are decidedly for having all officers elective by the people or their immediate representatives, and would carry out the principle by having nominations of candidates made previous to the election of the Representatives who shall decide between them. We will "gage our dukedem to a beggarly dernier" the people will never give the people a Secretary Woodbury, or a Post Master Kendall; or if they do tumble into such an accident, will soon give them notice to quit. If this plan be adopted, leg and Post Office sub treasurers, will be as rare as the remains of the Mastodon.

Dickerson College .- Wo have received the ca logue of the officers and Students of this institution for the year 1838-9. By this it would appear that at present the number of students are 223 viz: Law Students 19, Senior 18, Juniors 22 Sophemores 32, Freshmen 22-Pursuing the partial course 8, and Grammer School 102.

The plan of study in this Institution is on peculiarly adapted to facilitate the entrance of young gentlemen into society with those principles of general education which so eminently conduce both to literary and social success. In our colleges, the English branches of science are too frequently lost sight of in what we conceive an undue attention to the classics, and the more philosophemic discussions of mathematics. These, the latter in particular, are seldom firmly grasped by the mind of collegiate students: they require maturity of intellect, and expansion of reasoning powers, and should therefore be left for after study. The refined pages of Euripedes, Terence and Sophocles, with the lighter reading of Horace and Ovid, tend particularly to give a tone to the classic student, while the analytical methematical works of Davies or Young will induce an aptitude for mechanical research, which will be followed up after graduation. Many young gentlemen enter college with competent English education to fit them for any station in life, but when they bid farewell to the halls of branches, which are most essential in their intercourse with the world.

. No mind can be stored during a collegiate course; its bent may be directed, its taste formed, to the mass of study, that is forced on the under graduate, too superficially for practical benefit, that we find those who distinguished themselves at college, in a few years after, forgetting in the bustle of life, those very branches in which they excelled. The reason of this is evident; a retentive memory has acted in the place of acute highest honors. But the moment the mnemonic powers rust for want of use, the once gifted orator of the Salutstory or Valedictory, degeneration of the Salutstory of the Salut observation, and carried them preudly to the ates into a common place Scholar.

These are the views, which our experience has citement. taught us, and lead us to yield a mort decided

We feel pride in the honorable fairness evinced by the Whige in every stage of the embarrassing proceedings at the Capitol, and only regret, that the rashness of our opponents has not led them to reflect that a similar course on their part would have conduced to their credit and the reputation charter of the Miners' Bank and the Leb-
