From the Connecticut Courant. EX SENATOR (NILES.)

Laborer. Good morning, Mr. Senator. Senator. Good morning, Mr. Wilson, how do you do to day? How is your wife and children-how do you stand this hard winter- and how does the good old cause of the party get on in your town? Laborer. Pretty well sir, though times are rather hard, money scarce, and labor is not as well paid for as it used to be, still we hav'nt turned Whigs yet; and don't mean to.

Senator. That's right—stick to the party to the last, and we will in the end, have a hard money currency. The Sub Treasury will make us all rich. It will give to every man as much money as he wants, and that, too, of the right kind-the real Laborer. But I have read in the speeches of Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Walker, that the Sub Treasury will diminish the price of labor. Having always looked upon you as the "Dr. Franktin of New England," and knowing that you have recently been to Boston to talk to the folks of Massachusetts, I come down to day to ask you how the Sub Treasury will. help the laboring man, when it reduces the price of a thing works for every individual, and yet it is easy to see how it works for the benefit of the whole. Laborer. I bought a house last year of my neigh-bor Wheaton; I paid him $300 in cash, and gave him a mortgage for $300, to be paid at the rate of $100 a year. Now this I could easily save, with wages at $1 50 a day—and in five years the house would be paid for. But if wages are reduced to 75 cents a day, or even a dollar, it will just take all that I can earn to support my family—and my house, with all that I have paid on it, will, at the end of five years, go back to Mr. Wheaton. How then am I to a general rule. No general rule works well in eve ry case. You should'no have gone in debt-you'd 1 had $300, and in five years could easily have earnt the rest, and lived in the house all the time. Serator. No matter tit is one of the principles of the party to have no credit: no real good Locolocos has a bit of credit, and you must go it or you are duced. Senator. Why you belong to your party don't you? Laborer. Yes.

Senator. Well-it is for the benefit of the party, and therefore it is for your benefit. Laborer. This is not quite clear to me, and I am not quite saurin that it is quite right. But, since you have been to Buston to LECTER, I suppose it must be true.

Senator. I don't see myself exactly how its goes for the good of the people.

Laborer. Will the pay of the members of Congress be diminished? If you are made Governor next spring, will you get less wages than Governor Ellsworth gets? Will the wages of the Postmasters tal benefit, and could'nt well be otherwise.

Laborer. Then the office holders will all be benefitted by the sub-Treasury, will they, sir. Senator. Yes- akind of incidental benefit, which we do not well see how to avoid. Laborer. And the laborers, Mr. Senator -

Senator. Yes, the laborers will get a kind of general benefit, which it is not very easy to explain - but still, they will know it when it comes. Laborer. You don't suppose, Mr. Senator, that the benefit which the officers receive from the sub-

Senator. Oh, no! by no means. They are in its avor because it is for the good of the party. They don't want any thing from it for themselves. Laborer. I wish I could be a luttle sarrin about this reducing the price of labor being such a good Senator. You must rely a little on your partythey will do every thing right.

Laborer. Yes, I know that; but now, in our town

Senator. I tell you neighbor, you must have con-"TRUTH GUARDS THE PER, AND SANCTIFIES THE fidence. It is a good thing to have labor down. I can now hire a man to work in my garden next summer for eight dollars a month, instead of six-teen, by which I shall make a clean saving of fifty Labourer. But will that he a benefit to the laboring man or to you? Senator. It will be a kind of incidental benefit to me, and a kind of natural consequence to him-Laborer. I cannot exactly see, Mr. Schator, how labor is benefited by having wages reduced one half Some of our neighbors have a notion that the office holders are in favor of it because their salaries will then be worth more than they are now.

Senator. It is certain the thing will work so.

But, then, it is only a kind of incidental benefit. Laborer. But don't you think they really mean to benefit themselves at the expence of the laboring Senator. Oh, no!! They are a high minded race of men, who would not do any thing for them selves. 🕒 Laborer. But they always stick mighty close to and their party.

Laborer. Their principles and their party, you nust confess, always lie along the same road with their own interests.

Senator That may be, but it is merely acciden Laborer. It may be so, Mr. Senutor, but still I can't exactly see why all the accidental benefits should operate to depress labor and discourage in-

ANECDOTE OF GEN. HABBISON.—The following cur cumstance was mentioned during the session of the Harrishurg Convention by Judge Burnet, of Ohio, a warm personal friend of General Harrison. Many years since, while the great tide of emigration was flowing through the western States, the hero of the Thames having, for a while, exchanged the arduous duties of a statesman and a general, for the more peaceful pursuits of agriculture, was on a hot summer evening, at the porch of his humble "Log Cab-in" asked for shelter and a meal, by a Minister of the Methodist Episcopal persuasion. The jaced ap-pearance of the steed, and the soiled garments of the rider, proclaimed the fatigue of the day, and with his usual courtesy, the old General welcomed the stranger. After a plain and substantial supper, the guest joined with his host in social conversation and the latter, laying aside the character of the soldier, and statesman, willingly listened to the pious instruction of the traveller. They retired to rest, the good old soldier thankful to a munificent Providence, that he was enabled to administer to the wants of a fellow creature, and the worthy minister of Christ, invoking the blessings of Heaven upor the head of this kind benefactor. Morning came and the Minister prepared to depart. He was in the act of taking leave, when he was informed that his horse had died during the night. This loss, how. ever severe, c naidering that he had yet two hundred miles to trevel, did not discourage him to the exercise of his duty; but taking his saddle bags on his arm, he rose to depart with thanks for the kindness of his entertainer. The old General did not attempt to prevent him, though he offered his conce upon the loss; but an observing eye could have dieected a smile of inward satisfaction, which the consciousness of doing good alone produces.-The guest reached the door, and to his astonish found one of the General's horses accoutred with his own saddle and bridle, in waiting for him. He returned and remonstrated, stating his in ability to pay for it, and that in all probability he should never again visit that section of country. But the General was inexorable, and reminding the astonished Divine, that "he who giveth to the poor lend eth to the Lord," sent him on his way, his heart
