row space over the lace remained open. I felt the sides of the coffin jer and rub against my arm and I despaired that I should ever recover my pow er of motion.

The coffin was lifted and placed upon a table. Bome one asked when I was to be buried ! "This siternoon," was the answer-"he has now been dead two days" I had then been unconscious for the length of a whole day. Now the time, instead of dragging a weary length, seemed to fly with ughtening-like rapidity. The past seemed endlessly long-the future was for-shortened to a breath, a moment. The clock ticked faster and faster, and time seemed to pour itself away in rapid moments, as a ' rising thunder cloud empties its fierce heavy drops more and more rapidly. It was siternoon-the company gathered-the shutter creaked beside me, and the window was opened. I felt the warm breath of the spring air steal over my face like a delicious odor. I heard the birds singing smong the branches, and the gentle rustling of the swaying trees, as the wind stirred smong the leaves. I thought of all the gladsome earth-of the blue sky-of the rippling brogks, half sunlight, half shadow-of the early evening clouds, whose lines shift like the colors on the dove's neck-of the stars, of the moon, of the swelling and heaving ocean, and clung to the memory of them with a mute despair, loving them the more the nearer I came to losing them.

At last the dim hum abont the room ceasedthe cluck tickled loudly, and the clergyman's voice repeated those first sentences in the service for the dead-" I am the resurrection and the life." &c.

His voice ceased-I gave myself up to despair. I tried to resign myself to the dreadful thought that I was to be build alive. Some one lifted the lid to screw it down ere I should be removed; 1 heard a faint exclamation from some one bending over me-"Good God! he must be alive yet; there are drops of per-piration now upon his fore head! Bring a mirror and place it to his lips; he may breathe yet.". It seems that the extremity of my agony had wrong out a cold dew upon my skin. No sooner had the words been spoken, than there was a wild hurry, and suppressed exclamations of fear, and doubt, and surprise about the room. What a moment of agony was the next! The fearful anticipation lest, after all, there should be no sign's of breath, was worse than all before. The mirror was brought, and then I knew, by the sudden and fearful cry, that my real state, that of Catochus, was at last known I was bled instantly; between my lips a few drops of brandy were forced, and my limbs and bead wore foinented with heated cloths, with such effect, that in two hours I regained my power of motion and sat up, though weak from loss of blood and entirely exhausted by the dreadful suffering through which I had passed as through a fiery ordeal. B lieve me, those pains I would not suffer again, if the price should be a shower of all the wealth and glory that the world can bestow --Such suffering does not leave a man where it finds him. I arose from my bed an altered man ; with my moral and mental constitution completely changed.

The main incident of this story, however improbable it may seem, is founded upon fact; and has occurred within the range of the writer's experience.

Catochus is only a peculiar form of Catalepsy, in which the patient retains the use of his various senses while the power of motion is entirely suspended and presents an appearance which may easily be mistaken for death. In removing some bodies from the vault of a church in a neighboring city, on the occasion of erecting a new church, it way discovered that their hodies had assumed such a situation as could only be accounted for on the supposition of their having been buried while in a state of suspended animation or stupor ; they havin their auffin-

OUR OWN AFFAIRS .- Our wants at the present time make it absolutely necessary that we call again upon our subscribers to pay up their liabilities. We are well aware of the scarcity of money and the unusual depression of business, but our friends must bear in mind that we also are affected by these causes, and that we are not able to pass unscathed through the fire which singes others. Our necessities are pressing-we have to purchase paper and pay our hands; this cannot be doue unless our subscriptions are prompt ly paid. Those who are able will therefore conler a signal favor by calling, and settling, and should any want the ability to pay all, a part, from such would be acceptable. Some subscriptions now due us, are for so long a time as five years, and these too from persons who are well able to pay. Unless those who owe us attend to this duty, or give some satisfaction before the first of the ensuing year, we shall be forced to stop their papers and pursue the course already adopted by other journals, viz : of publishing their names with the amounts due placed opposite, at the head of our columns, as delinquents.

As soon as the official quantity of coal is reeived from the Lehigh and Lackawana regions. we will furnish our readers with our annual statistics of the Coal trade.

Notwith-tanding the general depression of the imes, it is generally conceded that the low rates at which coal has been selling will increase the consumption for the present year at least 150, 000 tons. Since the business has ettained any exthe navigation as they have this year. ness a very unprofitable one to all those engaged in it here. We sincerely hope that we may never again witness the same triats and difficulties and that another season may bring us better prices and a healthier trade.

ACCIDENTS .- It has been our painfol daty to relate the occurrence of several serious accidents. which have already taken place upon the Pottsville and Reading Rail Road. In no one instance have the Conductors or the Engineers been deserving of the slightest blame, but on the contrary, the cause was confined to unavoidable acci-
