The Age-Credulity-Popular Errors. It has been said, that the age in which we live is a superstitions, credulous, or fanstical one -. more easily to wonders, improbabilities, and strange incomprehensiple doctrines, than they have hitherto, and that the world is singularly prepared to be gulled into any supernatural sect or belief. Taken in one sense, this view of the subject is true, but taken in the proper light, it is false and calculated to mislead. We are not among those who believe that at certain periods a general and universal change of feeling springs up in the intelligence of sensible beings, operating upon all so as to form marked eras in history-nor do we ever wish to believe so, for it is as improbable as it is ludicrous. Yet we do not deny that such eras have existed, remarkable for a peculiar and universal characteristic, for we have indubitable proof of the factmay more, we are at this moment in the midst of such a period, and can all perceive its identity; but we do say that the cause and effect are both mistaken, and that the corrective for the evil-has never been properly administered. The qualities (material or immaterial) which induce men to credulity, are inherent parts of every human intellect-the same now as centuries ago, and, we believe, in neither a greater or lesser proportion. As long as the general occupation of a nation is such as to draw the public contemplation into a source spart and distinct from the marvolous, so long will the mental character of the people remain sensible and reasonable. But when, from any general cause, this healthy intelligence is checked, then the community, as with a single mind, (we speak with exceptions) is prepared to receive any impression, which the unexercised faculty can act upon or approximate to. Such a cause may be found in periods of general calamity or suffering, or in times of universal depression in business, such as the paesent. The: mind becomes unoccupied and disgusted with that which lately engaged its attention; a spreading despondency broads over the community, and a wild disposition to very the subject of contemplation turns the passage of thought into strange and unwonted channels. Then comes the harvest of the charlatan and the fanatic-then it is that dark boding sects and wonderful deep meaning sciences spring into existence and sweep along with a measureless and resistle s career. The d, blinded, dazzled, pauses not to consider but is carried on with the impetuosity of the mass, and is only stopped by a cause similar in nature, but differing in character, with that which gave the disposition. It is in vain that the calm mind interposes its power-to stem the current-credulty will not be reasoned with, and can only be checked by that which will diver the thought completely. If it were possible for a at such a period, the good which might be effec-

A host of extravagant sects | sale at this office - price twenty-five cents. and strange scientific theories have infested, and are still cumbering our land, the ambitious and unprincipled leaders of which are enriching them selves by, whilst they sneer at, the credulity which sustains them, Some of these are already dving a natural death, and time, which will effect of general reaction in public sentiment, will kill the rest. With a certain portion of the community these popular errors are too frequently winked at or made the subject of amusement, and the press often fails in its duty by leading off in such a course. It should calmly point out the cause, and without rillicule, seriously, reason upon the effect; this would moderate the evil although it could scarcely eradicate it.

THE ESCAPPMENT. - We learn from various sources that the intended Military Encampment at this place meets with great approbation abroad. and that a number of companies at Reading, Philadelphia, and elsewhole, have signified their willingness to attend. It has been proposed that the Encampment shall not be held until August; that month for numerous reasons being the most appropriate. We hope in the mean time that every arrangement will be made, on the part of those -concerned, to ensure a brilliant and creditable array. Potteville, in point of military character, sustains a high reputation, and we feel assured that, if this matter is undertaken, it will be carried through successfully.

THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.-We have frequently noticed, on the part of citizens, a want of the proper regard with which this serious and invaluable privices should always be received-we have seen a disposition to treat it lightly, and make it a subject of amusement, by disrobing it of that gravity which should always be part of its exercise. It is a highly responsible privilege, and upon its careful exercise may depend the fortunes and liberties of the Republic. Men should come up to the polls with a full sense of the importance of their votes, at the same time remembering thatthose, votes form a component part of the great mass of opinion, whose weight may decide the destinies of the country. In all election move. ments, whether for the General Government, the State, or the Borough, this view of the franchise should be preserved, and the dignity of republicans maintained. We have been sorry to observe in our own town, too great a disregard for its importance, and sincerely hope that a reformation of the error may soon take place.

James H. Campbell, Esq., has authorised us to state, that he declines being a candidate for any office at the Borough Election, on Monday next. JOHN, Quincy ADAMS. The following is an ac count of the domestic life of the man who is some times styled the old federal aristocrat.

" At home John Quincy Adams is universally espected, and on all occasions acts the part of a genuine republican. He always rises at day-break, and long before the sun is up, you will find him at his desk in his chamber, writing or poring over papers which have been handed down to him by his patriotic sire, who served his country so zeniously and advantageously in the stormy days of the revolution. Mr. Adams enters heartily into the wents of his fellowtownsmen; he often officiates as moderator at the town meetings in Quincy, and as often acts as arbiter in settling disputes which occur between his neighbors. He is sportive and full of instructive anecdotes. He attends church constantly, and notwithstanding he keeps two or three carriages, he always walks... When the tide suits, he is fond of walking to the beach, about a mile from bis house, to have a solitary swim in the salt sea'; and this is pretty well for a gentleman of his advanced age. Mr. Adams is now over seventy years of age, and being exceedingly temperate and methodical in every thing, he always enjoys excellent health. His constitution is as sound as it was thirty years ago."

We take the following from the New York Tribune; it promises to become a serious matter and may give our Government great trouble:

A BURGLAN SHOT DEAD .- Wednesday night. between two and three o'clock, Mr. Peter McCabe, grocer, near the County Court House, shot a negro man, who had entered his store, to steal, unnails in the heels, and then add a hoot belonging der the following circumstances :- The negro entered by the back window, passed though the bed room, where Mr. McCabe, wife and family were asleep, into the store room, and commenced his depredations without causing alarm. Mrs. McC. being disturbed by the falling of some article from few minutes before her death, while her children the thiet's hands, awakened her husband, who got up and attempted to light a candle, his wife handing him his pistol as he did so: While endeavorthem that many years ago, she had buried fourteen thousand dollars under the corn crib. This ing to make the light, the negro rushed in upon news was so surprising that the young people him, and seizing him threw him down, and placcould scarcely wait to hear the last groans of their ed his knee on his breast. In this extremity, mother, so anxious were they to investigate the Mr. McCabe discharged his pistol into his antagoground under the corn crib. The money was ac nist's right side he fell and expired in a few ninutes. The burglar was a large and powerful man and belonged to Mr. John Enders. Mr. McCabe is small in stature, and but that he was armed, would have been perfectly at the mercy of the negro. The jury of inquest which was held over the body of the deceased, rendered a verdict completely justifying Mr. McCabe -- Richmond Compiler.
