He is a property holder, and owns a house in this borough, valued at 3000 dollars. It is a well established, and we believe generally admitted fact, that the value of property in our Borough is owing mathly to the amount of business transacted here. Now,if we as citizer.s, or so business men, withhold support from our not by a general furniout, for that we have al own community and pur hase goods fin our business and family directly from Philadelphia, we decrease the value of property by curtailing or effectually cutting off the source from whence it derives its worth. It is not then an unfair presumption to say that if all our citizens followed the example of our friend in purchasing in the city, property would lose at foist one half of its value .-Now by his fancied system of economy, he saves. twenty-five dollars annually, and it will take a saving of that amount for sixly years to cover the lass accruing to that sing's piece of property, should all the others be induced to embrace the same system. This is a plain, terse, and not over wrough', picture of the inevi able result which will follow the withdrawal of patronage from our business community.

Our friend has fallen into the error of many like reasoners, who think that they should be ahis to purchase goods in this place at as low a rate as the Philadelphia cash prices; and forgetting that the policy, would only permituate the evil, he withdraws his pstronage from our Borcugit stores closed the corlege on horseback. It is evident to all fortimer. that the hver production has been caused entirely by the order system-the operator at the place o

We consider the course adopted by the gettle an above referred the as the most certain remedy r the evil, that can be resorted to. It his example is followed, generally by these dealers who depend for their profits more upon the coal trade than their stores, it will, by reducing the profit on goods, take sway from the stor keeper all inducement to take orders, and receiving coal in pryment; and consequently prevent them from injuring the trade ly saciificing coal at low rates as feretofore. We wish to bring this question home to the consciences of those (f such there be) who think the Whige ought to follow in the train o' John Tyler, and render him honors if not homage on the visit to this City. Why should we so treat him ? For what ? He is President, say you. But is the President more than the Chief Justice, umber of the corps, so that the requisite tents and who comes and goes unstrended and unnoticed, without dreaming that he is insulted?
