Shyrack, I'm going to kill myself. 'My dear fellow, let meentreat you not to do it.' 1-Will? 'No, no, oblige me, and don't.' Must do it.' Don't; it'll be the death of you !' Shyrack was quite cool and jocose, little dream ing so terrible an event was actually going to take place. Kingston had, as the last eccentric act of hi life, taken a chisel and mallet to bed with him, and now, with desperate resolve, he seized the extraordinary tools of death, and in an instant drove the blade of the chisel into his breast $\tilde{!}$ The hair rose upon Shyrack's head, and fright spread like a sheet of snow over his face. "Kingston! Kingston ! my dear fellow-you d-d rascal, Kingston! do you want to have me hung ? Hold on ! don't you die till I call somebody. Shyrack ran to the door, and called like a madman to some people across the street. Hallo ! here ! say, you mister ! all you stupic people, make haste over here; or there'll be a murder ! The people crowded into Kington's house. Don't die, Kingston ! Don't chisel me that way ! Don't die till you tell them who did it.' I did it myself,' said Kingston. "There, that'll do; now, my dear fellow, you may die,' replied Shyrack, taking a long breath and wiping the perspiration from his forehead. And Kingston did die, in this extraordinary manner, leaving his fate to be recorded as a suieide that was almost a murder !-- N. O. Pic. GOING ASHORE .- A very clever anecdote is told of a chap who once took passage on board of a Lake schooner, Soon after the bark had weighed anchor, the wind began to blow, and in a short time it was found necessary to take in every stitch of canvass; and with bare poles the schooner flew over the waves with lightning-like rapidity. The schooner was now fifteen miles from shore-the wind was blowing tremendously, and the night as " dark as a stack of black cats."

The danger was imminent-fear was legibly written upon every face. At this moment the passenger came on deck, with his baggage strapped snugly upon his back. Walking up to the cap-Dain, his face as long as a yard-stick and laying his hand heavily upon the shoulder of the latter, he remarked, with all the gravity of a philosopher " Captain, I believe I'll go ashore !"
