The world doth lead us captive-so our thoughts Are not in sympathy with the sad heart Of the sweet Llossoms as they fall to earth. The Apple mournetheor her perished wreath,
And the young Almond makes the grass-mound white With her lost wealth. Leaning against her prop, The Peach lamenteth o'er her pallid babes,

Lift up your voice, ye birds! From your cool nests, or on the soaring wing,-And comfort them. Tell of the time of fruit,-When this brief season shall be turned to joy Sing of the Master's gladness, when he comes To gather in his treasures. Bid them bide in cheerful Hope, the darkness of this hour,-And lend their fragrance to the ingrate winds, Since God remembreth them, and will restore Beauty for ashes.

Higher hit your strain," Minstrels of Heaven! and ack the stricken trees, If their frail blossoms fell not in the tomb. Where would the harvest he ?

An Original.

Some years since an acquaintance of ours set out on horseback from the eastern part of Mussachusetts for the green mountains of Vermont .-While travelling through the town of New Salem, his road led into a piece of woods, some few miles in length, and long before he got out of which he began to entertain doubts whether he should be blest with the sight of a human habitation; but as all things must have an end, so at last the woods, and the neat brown house of a farmer greeted his vision. Near the road, was a fall, rawboned. overgrown, lantern-jawed boy, probably seventeen years of age, digging potatoes. He was a curious figure to behold. What was lacking in the length of his tow breeches, was amply made up for behind; his suspenders appeared to be composed of birch bark, grape vine and sheep skin, and as for his hat, which was of a dingy white felt-poor thing, it had once evidently seen better days-but now alas! it was the shadow of its glory. Whether the tempest of time had beaten the top in, or much dive, fits, bad taste in the mouth, difficult breath the land's expanding genius had burst it out, it was missing-and through the aperture red hair in abundance stood six ways for Sunday. In short. he was one of the roughest specimens of domesticmanufacture that ever mortal beheld. Our travelling friend, feeling an itching to scrape an acquainhorse and began:-

Hallo my friend; can you inform me how far it it is to the next house!'

Jonathan started up-leaned on his hoe handle rested one feet of the gambrel of his sinister leg and replied:

'Hallo yourself! how'd dew? Well I jes can. Tain! near so far as it used to be afore they cut. the woods away-then 'twas generally reckoned four niles, but now the sun shrivels up the road, and don't make morn tew. The fust house you summer complaint, faithing of he chest, choice, spayms, cramps, of the come to though is a barn, and the next is a haystack; but old Hoshin's house is on beyont. You will be sure to meet his gals long afore you get there; tarnal compin critters, they plague our folks mor'n a little. His sheep get-into our pasture every day, and his girls into the orchard. Dad every day, and his girls into the orchard. Dad toms of no tree living.

They don't come at all; I digs em out; and there's an everlastin' snarl of 'em in each hill.' But they are small, I perceive.

REDUNDANT WHISKERS are now con-REDUNDANT WHISKERS are now considered almost as necessary, an appendage to the man of fashion, as a coat of the latest London crut. But alast how many aspiralist to those hirsute honors, are doomed to disappointment. "That inestimable oil Macasser," as Byron sneertuely called that exploded humbing, won't produce the desired crop—nor bears oil—nor ox marrow—nor any of the thousana preparations in use, except Dr. Jayne's celebrated Hair Tenic, the efficacy of which, in restoring the hair, no man who leads the testimonials in its favor, from men of the highest standing in the country, can for an instant doubt. Jayne's Hair Tonic, will not only renew the hair when it has fallen off, but will prevent it from turning gray.
