But ah, she was so artless mild. But ah, she was so artless, mild,
Hor ways so sweetly winning,
Had we not lov'd this matchless child
We would have deemed it sinning.
She sang; and a purer, happier life
To the listening one was given,—
Our carth-chords yielded to her knife,
And we flew away to Heaven.

One beauteous evening, all her song-Was of some loving story,
And my soul began to sigh and long
For like sweet scenes of glay;
But then she changed, and her voice so soft
Fell o'ermy sense like manna,—
I could not raise mine eyes aloft
For my heart was all piano.

passed into a reverie—
And heeded not her playing—
Mid early scenes, with childish glee
My thoughts were sweetly straying.
Just then she crased and softly spoke—
Why surely sir you're dreaming—
I started—found as I awoke
Mine eyes with tears were streaming.

I need not say, what words were passed, Enough—she told me "no.sir," And as I left, one look she cast. And cried out "you may to sir."

A Rich Practical Joke. A friend told us a joke a few evenings ago, and though it was told us in confidence we cannot resist the temptation of laying it before our readers, let the consequence be what it may In the western part of this city live and flourish two jolly young fellows who follow sign painting for a livelihood, and who are sometimes in the habit of cutting up what are termed high shines.'-It so occurred a few days ago, that one of the part-ners had some out-door business to attend to, and lest the shop in charge of his partner, and a little boy who was employed to grind paints. During his absence, the partner remaining went to work and painted the boys neck so as to represent a large gash, and a cut over the eye. He then took red paint, bespattered it over the floor, clotted the shair and made him lay down in a corner .-He then painted a geat gash on his own cheek bared his bosom, disordered his dress, dipper a long-bladed knife in a red pot, and patiently waited the return of his partner. Directly he heard him at the door, the performance commenced.— The partner stuck his head into the room door; one glance was sufficient—the boy was prostrate on the floor, with his throat cut, groaning and crying murder-chairs, tables, benches, jugs, and paint pots, were strewed around the room in dire confuon, while the murderous looking partner, with the bloody looking knife in his uplifted hand, was running through the room uttering wild and inco-herent expressions. It was evident to the partner at the door that his partner had killed the boy.—

The thought was horrid. Swift as lightning he flew to his father and informed him of the circumstances. A number of friends were mustered who repaired forthwith to the scene of action. The crowd augmented as it neared the shop-and in walked the whole posse-but what was their as-

ANECDOTE .- Take your time to die .- The following is a capital anecdote, which actually occurred some years since in one of the theatres in tonishment to find the boy without a mark of any kind, the room in perfect order, no marks of blood perceptible, and the partner engaged in lettering a sign!—and utter ignorance of any thing of the kind avowed by both him and the boy to the other partner's great mortification-more, especially as the persons he brought there hinted to one another that during his absence he might have indulged too freely in "fire water !"-- Common-

During the performance of a play that was of course never repeated, the last scene was the death of a powerful monarch, who in his dying moments, was dictating his will-such an one was to succeed him to the throne-another was to be a monarch of such vast possessions, he consumed great deal of time in dying, so much so indeed, hat one at least of the audience got out of all patience, and cried out-

I say, Mr. King there, I wish you'd die, and had luck to ye-for ye'll be after keeping us all night here to see the end of ye!'

'Pat Dooley! howld yer tongue for a blackguard,' shouted one on the opposite side of the theatre, fiercely shaking a good shilalah at Mr. Dooley rhowld yer tongue, I say, for a blackguard, of rell bate you worse nor I did at Killarnny fair. Then turning to the dying monarch, he addressed his majesty with the utmost earnestness thus,-·Take yer time to die, yer worship, if it be an hour yet, and never a bit mind Pat Dooley, the spälpeen beyant!'

Do THAT IF YOU CAN .- After an action between an English and a Dutch fleet, news arrived that peace had been made between the two countries. Whereupon the two fleets began to show off feats of agility and strength, in the spirit of rivalry, A Dutch sailor mounted to the cap of the main mast of 74, and stood upright on his head. No man, for a time, could be found on board the English fleet capable of performing the feat. A ast, an old Jack far who never stood on his head in his life, says, "I'll try it, if I die for it!" His chipmates tried to change his resolution, but in vain. He mounted the cap of the mainmast of his ship, turned up on his head, and fell over! He was fortunate enough to catch by the rigging, and strange to say, came upon deck alive. His comrades ran to pick him up, but he shook them off, and hobbling to the side of the vessel, roared out to the Dutchman-"Do that! if you can!

A QUEE SERMON,-Every number of the Sunday Morning Mercury published in N. York, contains a sermon; but whether the preacher is a Christian, a Turk, or a Nothingarian, remains uncertain. He takes his text where he can find it. His last sermon is founded on a stanza of Dr. Girdley, who died some years ago.

When a few more years are wasted, When a few more springs are o'er, When a few more griefs I've tasted I shall fall to bloom no more.'?

And in moralizing thereupon he urges parents to take especial care of their children; to keep their sons from writing poetry till they can read the Testament to give them a flogging when they need it, and let them go a fishing occasionally. As to daughters, he thinks they should be disposed of in the matrimonial market as early as convenient, because "soon after five and twenty they fall to bloom no more;" and he adds, with great emphasic picom no more; and ne adds, with great emphasis, and false paint, gum, whale-bone, hogs bristles, and false hair don't make a lovely lass of sixteen out of an old maid, no how you fix it."

POISONED BY THE LEAF OF THE PIE PLANT. The whole family of Mr. Havens, of Bedford N. Y. were poisoned a few days since, in consequence of eating Rhubarb leaves boiled as greens; and it is feared that two of the children will not recover. The leaf of this plant, of which the stalk recover. The leaf of this plant, or which the stank is used for pies without danger, contains a considerable quantity of oxalic acid.

Mr. J. In Starkey, foot of Gouverneur, st., cared of cough of eighteen month's standing, supposed to be a settled Consumption, by these Lozengts, when the physicians could do nothing for him.

Mr. Charles W. Perkins, 71 Bowery, was cured of a severe cough and cold of three month's standing, by half a box of the Lozenges.

Rev. Mr. Hancock, 497 Pearlst., has used them in his family with invariable success, and secondmends them to all who are afflicted with coughs, colds, or any affections of the lungs.

Mr. M. E. Martin suffered several weeks with a distressing cough, which nothing relieved, till he tried these Lozenges, which cured him in few hours.
