Elihu Burritt has a better fancy of the steam base, than we requember to have met elsewhere before. This is his way of describing him:

"I love to see one of these huge creatures. with sinews of brass and muscles of iron, strut forth from his smoky stable, and saluting the long train of cars with a dozen sonorous pulls from his iron nostrils, fall gently back into his harness. There he stands, champing and foaming upon the iron track, his great heart a furnace of glowing coals; his lymphatic blood is boiling in his veins; the strength of a thousand horses is nerving his sinews-he pants to be gone. He would shake' St. Peter's across the desert of Sahara, if he could be fairly, litched to it, but there is a little sobereyed, tobacco-chewing man in the saddle, who holds him in with one finger, and can take away his breath in a moment, should he grow restrive and vicious. I am always deeply interested in this man. for, begrimed as he may be with coal diluted in oil and steam; I regard him as the ge-
