 Tr. Steelling—Sir:-I feel much gratified in being able to say to you, that the Pulmonary Syrup you sent, has been used by several persons with great success.—The first person who took it, had been confined to her bed for some time with a severe cough—after taking only on-bottle, she was almost entirely cured. A Sailor was rearing distressed with a couch, and could not find nothing to reliver bims—Ht took one bottle and called to say that he was almost entirely cured. While at Wondston, N. J. a short time since I found Mrs. S. W., labouring under a secerc cough, and scarce by able to sit up through the day—I felt confident that the Syrup would relieve her; accordingly I sent her a bottle—within a faw days, I heard that she was greatly benefited, and in a fair way of a spredy recovery. I can truly say, that almost every one that has taken it, acough. Yours &c. O. DOUGLASS.

It s good to try, as we have already affirmed, and to persevere also, hill effort and perseverance are good only in view of a good end, ascertained to be such, and sought only by legitimate means, and through the agency of kindred instrumentalities. A person in a position to act thus finds trying to be not a difficult matter the more especially that he is sustained in his courts not only by a consciousness of right an la seide of self-approval, but by a reasonable hope of approbation and praise of others. The negative effort, however, is not thus sustained, The day of trial, the hour of temptation to errthese prove at office the salutary character of the moral veto power, the necessity for its existence, and the difficulty of its exercise. It is not every one who can say 'no' when he ought; and hundreds of thousands have gone literally to ruin, in every sense of the phrase, whether moral, physical, political, oppecuniary, or otherwise, because of the weakness that prevented them from exerising the conservative power of the moral veto. The admonitory voice whether of conscience or filendship, which said 'you'd better not,' was either unheard or whileeded, and that of the tempter above listened the with attention.

It is an excellent conservative power, that which enables aginan to form a negative resolution al the right time and on the right occasion, and to faithfully carry jout the purpose of it-excellent not only for heaself always, but frequently for the public at large True, it is often difficult of exercise; but the conflict which it must carry on with passion, filde, prejudice ar self-interest, or all combined, and which makes the difficulty, attesta made mention of a discovery by one or more of the value of the principle, and proves the necessity
