POTTERS CREEK, June 6th, 1844. Dn. STEPLING-Dear Sir:--I have the pleasure of heing able to state that my daughter, who had been suffering undersever Asthma for 5 or 6 years, has here entirely curred of that painful disease, by the use of six nottles of your Palmonary Syrp. She was when test attacked with that complaint, only nine years of eee, and suffered with it heyond all description, for the period of near six years, having an attack about -yeery three or four weeks. It was to all appearance, confined and numovable—we tried many medicines without any rehef whatever. About this line, we heard of the superior efficacy of your Palmonary Syr-up and determined to give it a trial—we procured a dozen bottles off i: the first bottle relieved her very much, and by the time she had taken six bottles, she vas perfectly cured!!!-li is mow three three years since then, and she has not had the slightest attack of he Asthina. She suffered so much when laboring un-ler those attacks that we could hear her breath dis-inge attacks that we could hear her breath dis-ingeting, and we hadquire despired of her recove-POTTERS CREEK, June 6th, 1844.

El caballo es lo que siento.' + Before they could recover from the amazem created by this mysterious incident, the caravan was surrounded by a party of about twenty Brigands, who darted out as if by masic from the rocky recesses on either side of the ravine. In spite of the shrieks of his wife and children Senor Lewas in no way disconcerted. He beheld without emotion the robbers laying hands on his baggage; and when they seized the trunk he coolly presented the key. But one of the rubbers, with a significant gesture, drew out a long knife, and inserting it between the sides and the bottom of the trunk, he very dexterously detached the flat piece of wood which Vermont's ingenuity. had devised for concealment. The merchant for a few moments, stood motionless with astonishment, and then gave utterance to violent expressions of rage. The bandit held up the bright Governor of the city of Mexico, directed the miliblade of his knife, and said in a calm and subdued tone- Attempt no useless resistance, Scnor. if you value your life !' Yanez was borns in by this confidence, and on the day wheth he was erraigned before his judges, he manifested in his whole bearing, and in his replies to the questions put to him, the utmost coolness and presence el mind.

No sooner was by conducted into court, then, Antonio appeared, silowed by four of his accome plices, who had been successively put under anent. As if by an involuntary impulse, Yance started back with scenting disgust, and fixed his eyes on Antonio with a look expressing more foreibly than words, his indignation and contempt of the culprit who had betrayed his accomplices. The bandit shrunk under the glinde of his leader. He sppcared stupified, and chaid only stammer out a few indistinct answers to the questions addressed to him. Then turning pale and red by turns, he struck his hands' viplently on the bar, and said-I can disclose nothing. I know nothing, I care not for my life! You may take it !'

Yancz thought he was saved. He litt'e katw that the letters abstracted by the clerk had been replaced in the Fiscal's portfolio. He therefore contented himself with a scornful denial of the charges brought against him, and when Colonci Culvo dwelt on the prormity of the crime of deviperpetrate the deeds anez replied by a smile of cool indifference.

Don Jose Calvo then drew forth the criminatory letters. This was thunderbolt to all present-The transient doubt which had risen up in the minds of the judges now gave place to inquisitive suspence, sentence officeath was pronounced on Yancz and his seven accomplices. A piercing female shrick rang through the court on the delivery of the sentence. Fanez, however, maintained his firmness.

From a late Foreign Journal. General Santa Anna and Aid-de-Camp.

In the beginning of April, 1833, Senor La wealthy Mexican merchant was suddenly call'd out the real criminals proved ineffectual. to Europe by husiness of importance. As it was probable that his absence from his native country might be for a period of some duration, he determined on taking his lady and family with him --Previous his departuro from Vera Cruzwhere he proposed to embark, he requested an interview with General Santa Anna, the President of the Mexican Republic. The request was readily granted ; for Santa Anna was easily accessible to visitors. On being introduced to the President, Senor L---- found himself in the presence of a thin, muscular man, of dark olive com.

plexion, and a keen, penetrating eye-a man whose character was actually delineated in his features; Santa Anna's countenence expressed the cautious cunning of the Spaniard. First, the soldier of Ferdinand VII, then a revolutionary leader seeking power from vanity rather than from for inshness—alternately humano and cruel as the impulses of interest happen to prompt him.
