prevalent and excitable revolutionary spirit. In 1810 Hidalgo, Curate of Doloruss, tired of the for a while, the revolution exhibited flattering prospects of suscess. In two months, the flame and the mountains, and along the shores of either centuries had fed the moths, was unfurled from the hights of Toluca; and the Eagle that had led the Aztec warrior to the plains of Aushivac a thousand years before, seemed now as he poised upon the battlements, or upon the peak of the mountain, about to drive the gore fed Leopard from occidental Spain. But Hidalgo through some praccountable infatuation neglected to Avail himself of the universal panic which followed the self of the capitol ; and although terrified and paralysed by threatened ex-communication, and the bitter anatherna denounced against him, he lost his courage and spirit, and ultimately defeated and betrayed, fled into the internal provinces. It is gratifying that business men in the city are beginning to appreciate the advantages of otice of the country dealer, when he has leisure

But there are other benefits more general i their nature, yet not less important. By creating eants in the Country, it improves the Country usiness also; the Country dealer finds it necessav to provide for his customers articles of conveience, elegance and luxury, which might otherwise have laid in the City longer unthought of and a knoweledge of the City, its mode, tastes and its refinements, are gradually diffused through the Country. It is by the multiplication of wants, that improvement in condition and intelligence, among the people, must progress ; and it matters not to what extent they are multiplied, becaus corresponding stimulus is given to industry and enterprise, and the means to procute will equal the supply. But more important, still, is the consideration that by this means the people of the country are familiarized with the city, its localities, and the names and business of men; and this familiarity destroys the popular groundless prejudice which exists against the city, m many districts through and by convincing men that their interest, instead of being antagonistical, are identical and reciprocal, creates and diffuses kindly feeling, and gradually forms between the city and the country a tie of mion, and cements a natural sympathetic

President Polk, has arrived at Washington, and considerable ceremonious ctequette, has been going on between the acting President, and the President elect, as to who should make the first ceremonious call. It is said that visits have not been exchanged yet, but that Madam Tyler, has driven erto refused to pass this hill, to let it go through in her state equipage, to call on Mrs. Polk, as a stranger.

POLE'S CABINET .- Rumor assigns the differnt posts in Polk's Cabinet to the following percons, viz : Secretary of State, Mr. Buchanan; Secfirst rapid success of his arms, by possessing him- in tary of the Treasury, Mr. Bancroft; Secretary of War, Gov Marcy; Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Mason; Postmaster General, Mr. Saunders; and Attorney General, Mr. Walker.

> LEGISLATIVE .- We observe by the proceedings that a large number of pet'tions have been presented to the Legislature for a new Bank at Schuylkill Haven. A supplement to the charter of the Mill Greek Railroad has passed the Senate. The proceedings, at present, are not of much interest to our readers.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger states that Mrs. Tyler proposes to wind up her cathe rescue of her own good name, and of the honor and safety of the Commonwealth, whose anreer in the White House by one of the most magcient virtues now seem to nificent entertainments ever witnessed in Washcountry advertising; by being brought under the ington.
