This institution, flounded on the Mutual Safety and Joint Stock principle, and embracing all the recent improvements, in the science of Life Insurance, after having experienced the most marked sucess in Europe, has established effices in British America and various parts of the United States, where its principles are winning equal favour and approval.—Amongst the many advantages which it offers to principles are winning equalations and approval.

Amongst the many advantages which it offers to all persons wishing to insure their lives, are list—its reserver security arising from a large spaid up, and safely invested capital; 2d—its moderate rates of permism; 3rd—the participation of all profits by the insured, which (as the business of the Society in Great Britain and elsewhere, has become very extension in the life of the utrost benefit by the dimportance; 4th— If OR the circ of DEAFNESS, pairs, and the is I charge of matter from the cars; also all those disagreeable noises like the buzzing of insects falling of water, buzzing of steam, &c., &c. which are symptoms of approaching deafness and also attendant with the Great Britain and elsewhere, has become very extensive, is of the utmost benefit and importance; 4th—the use given to the Assured of two thirds of the amount of their former payments, whenever required—thus obviating the objections against Life Insurances with those whose incomes are precarious, and who might dread the possibility of being in arrear with their premiums, and of thereby forfeiting their previous payments.

Pamphleis containing the Society's rates and every other information, may be obtained on application to with interest as they speak facts, which are "stubborn things."

Most Extraordisary Cure:— If any have doubts they may now dismiss them, and the most incredulous may consider Deafness as curable. Numerous cases of cures, and many of them very remarkable—by the use of 'Scarpa's Oil,' have been published, but this 'caps the climax.' Young or old may 'vet recover hearing. A lady in Smithfield, Pennsylvania, and now about 80 years of age had been gradually getting deaf for more than 40 years, so that it was next to impossible to make her hear conversation in the loudest itenés of voice; Last winter she was induced to try 'Scarpa's Oil for' Deafness.' It is only, necessary to addithat she has used two bottles, and that her hearing is perfectly restord—she is cared.

Matrimonial' Annexation in Virginia; A Sketch from Life.

A few days since a young gentleman and lady of Madison, Virginia, concluded negotiations which had been going on for some time previous, on the subject of annexation, and the articles of union were duly signed and sealed by the parties and submitted to the mother, a very respectable widow lady, for ratification, who peremptorily refused her consent, and declared that annexation should, under no contingencies take place.

The parties got together afterward, and after deliberating maturely on the subject, concluded that as the mother would not acknowledge the independence of the young lady, and that as she was neither de jure nor de facto sovereign and independent, the only way to accomplish their object and consummate their wishes, was to revolutionize, and if possible achieve their independence in that way.

Accordingly, they procured a suitable conveystopped at an inn to refresh themselves, where they room, commenced a furious attack on her lover, The young lady has a good fortune. which soon put the whole village in an uproar, and brought many of the citizens to the

The brother was furious, and the lover was aarmed. The brother endeavored to intimidate the sister, but she resolutely declared for annexation, and that nothing but death should sever the bonds of union agreed upon between her and her lover. The brother still more exasperated, repeated a threat to kill the lover, which more and more alarmed him; and he was almost on the point of relinquishing his prize, and trusting to farther negotiation to bring about the ultimatum of his hopes and wishes-annexation. His whole soul had een set upon it. The whole heart of his lady ove was set upon it.

They had, as they thought, succeeded in action do! thought the lover. If I give her up, I am indone and miserable for ever; and if he kills me, why, then, she will be undone and broken-hearted forever-what shall I do? what can I do? Here are two to one against' me.' . You surely won't kill me;' said he to the brothnessed the greater part of the scene, took the young man aside and told him that he would set everything right in a twinkling, if he would follow his advice. My dear sir, I know you are a friend from the frankness with which you address me-tell me how to act, and I will obey you; and if I succeed, you will make me your devoted friend forever.' Very well, now mark me. He threatened to kill you-I heard him make the threat-all you over to keep the peace. He being a stranger in this peaceful little village of Centreville, nobody will go his bail; and the consequence will be he must go to jail, and then what will hinder you from securing your prize and proceeding to Washington, where your a be annexed. We are all for annexation here, and when both parties are willing, I don't see what right Great Britain, Mexico, or anybody else has to interfere."

Hope, joy and gratitude all rose in the vounc man's bosom and off he sped to the magistrate. who upon the evidence of his friend, issued the warrant, which, being placed in the hands of the town constable, the first thing the brother knew was that he was in limbo. While the trial was going on, the friend who had left word with the magistrate not to commit the brother, but keep him waiting some time for the accuser to appear, had the conveyance ready, and the rebellious subjects were again on their way to the city; and as rary lines: was not more than twenty-five or thirty miles, and as he was in favor of the measure he concluded to come along with them, bringing also another young friend, who volunteered his services on the occasion.

The brother, after having been detained a considerable length of time by the manistrate, and no prosecutor appearing, was of course set at liberty. On his return to the inn, and inquiring for the rebels, he was informed that they had been gone

NO. 33. The rebel party struck up a lively pace, and arrived in the city on Saturday evening, and stopped, of course, at the Virginia House, on C. street. The lover and one of the Centreville friends went immediately to the clerk's office and procured a license, whilst the other went in search of a parson. Just as everything was ready, and the sexton had announced that the parson was ready at the church to perform his duty, up drives another brother, who had taken the route by Richmond in pursuit of the rebel fugitives, and inquired if this was the Virginia House!' The Centreville friend, who judged from his hurried manner of speech that he was of the antiannexation party, promptly answered in the negative, and pointed to the Exchange as the Virginia House! The brother, in great haste, drove up to the Exchange, and finding that he had been deducaged close to the hatchway, and the fall was served, came back, and demanded if there was not about to be made fast so as to lower it down, when ceived, came back, and demanded if there was not a runaway couple in the house. From the Brooklyn Adecrtiser. Che New York Merchant,

OR, AN INCIDENT OF THE FIRE.

A gentleman of this city, hearing early on Saturday that his store in New York was in danger from the fire, baseued to the scene of destruction. On arriving at his store he found that the fire had already made considerable progress in his building. He hesitated but for a moment, and was about to spring up the burning stairway when he was seized by two or three bystanders, and asked if he was a madman thus to meet certain death so rashly. "Hold me not back gentleman," he said "I'm not mad; but I must and will save my iron chest, though I perish in the attempt. Then with a sudden effort he released himself from those who in kindness, would have held him back, and in a noment more he had passed the burning staircase and was nextiseen running from room to room despite of the bluze and smoke of the burning building. The key of his safe was not to be found in the usual place, and disappointed in not being able to obtain the contents, he made an effort to remove the safe itself; failing in this he left the building, and wildly entreated some of the bystanders to aid him. All refused for the destruction scemed certain. Again did he plunge amidst the destructive element, he had scarcely reached the spot where stood the safe, when two men, who had witnessed his previous effort, stood beside him and vowed ther would stick by him to the last. The crowd thinking the men had followed for the purpose of rescuing the dangerous man from his dangerous Surpase, shouted: "Knock him dawn."-"drag him out"-he'll be killed. With the assistance of two men, the safe was at the moment the rear of the store fell inward. A huge mass of smoke and flame ascended on greeted with chiers by the crowd. The merchant, it was thought, was impleemably lost; but not so. He had fallen dow in a stupor, but quickly recovering, however; he was seen-when the smoke consequent upon the falling in of the rear wall. had cleared squewhat away-by the chest striving with all his inight to tumble it down the hatchway. The people collected around were amazed, and ordered his clerk to record it in the book of and thought him crazy and invulnerable. The fate, and the parties left with smiling faces, and fire was above, below, and all around him, and hearts throbbing with the liveliest emotions and how the nerobant stood there alive, and seemingly unhart, was a mystery no one could explain. Just as the parties turned the corner, the broth. On witnessing his exertions at the chest, every er found his way out of the yard, and came into one held this brighth-and save the cracking of the the church much excited. He proceeded to a place in his office, where he kne wwas piaced a small hatchet, took it, climbed to the third story with astonishing agility and servered the rope from the burning drum, to which it down he sprang again. At times he was hid from the eyes of those assembled outside, and again he would be seen affitting about as though he was proof against destruction, and a cheer would ascend. Soon he was seen standing on the sidewalk with the severed rope over his shoulder, but in an instant one side of the store fell in and he was again hidden by a volume of fire and smoke That cleared away and he was again seen hard at work on the safe endeavoring to thrust the hook at the end of the rope through its handle. He succeeded, and then carrying the other end of the rope in his hard, came as far as it would permit of toward the crowd and was received with the most vociterous acclamation. It is needless to say there were plenty faid hold of the rope. The chest was lrugged out amid hurrahs, and placed in safety.

"In the name of Heaven," asked several "why isk your life thus for the sake of what wealth the chest may contain! Between dollars and life, who, but you, would hesitate. ?"
