Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COLLEGE Of Health.

NO MEDICINE has ever been introduced to the A-merican Public, whose virtues have been more heerfully and universally acknowleged, than the a-WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS.

To descant upon their merits, at this late day, would eem to be wholly unnecessary, as very few indeed who read this article, will be found unacqualisted with the real excellence of the medicine. But if further proof were wanting to establish the credit of this singular remedy, it might be found in the fact that no medicine in the country has been so

SHAMELESSLY COUNTERFEITED.

Ignorant and unprincipled men have at various places, manufactured a spurious pill; and in order more completely to deceive the public have made it in outward appearance to resemble the true medicine. These wicked people could never pass off their worth-fest trash, but for the assistance of certain misguidestorickeepers, who because they can purchase the spurious article at a reduced rate, lend themselves to this monstrous system of imposition and crime.

The patrons of the above excellent Pills, will therefore be on their guard against every kind of imposition, and remember the only genuine Agents in Pottsville, are Messrs, T. & J. Beatty.

The following highly respectable store keepers have een appointed Agents for the sale of RIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, FOR

The Corch of Liberty. BY THOMAS MOORE.

I saw it all in Fancy's glass-Herself the fair, the wild magician. That aid the splendid day-dream pass, And nam'd each gliding apparition.

'Twas like a torch-race-such as they Of Greece performed in ages gone, When the fleet youths, in long array, Passed the bright torch triumphant on:

I saw the expectant nations stand. To catch the coming flame in turn-I saw, from ready hand to hand. The clear, and struggling glory burn. And oh! their joy, as it came near,

'Twas in itself a joy to see-While fancy whisper'd in my ear, "That torch they pass is Liberty!" And each, as she receiv'd the flame, Lighted her altar with its ray,

Then, smiling to the next who came, Speeded it on its sparkling way. From Albion first, whose ancient shrine Was furnished with the fire already, COLUMBIA caught the spark divine, And lit a flame like Albion's steady

The splendid gift that GALLIA took, And, like a wild Bacchante, raising The brand aloft, its sparkles shook, As she would set the world a blazing: Next Spain-so new was light to her,-Leap'd at the torch-but, ere the spark

She flung upon her shrine could stir, 'Twas quench'd-and all again was dark. Yet, no- not quench'd-a treasure, worth So much to mortant, rarely dies-Again her living light look'd forth. And shone, a beacen, in all eyes.

Who next received the flame? alas. Unworthy Naries-shame of shames, That ever through such hands should pass The brightest of all earthly flames!

Scarce had her fingers touch'd the torch,

When, frighted by the sparks it shed,

Nor waiting e'en to feel the scorch, She dropp'd it to the earth-and fled. And fall'n it might have long remain'd But GREECE, who saw her moment now,

Caught up the prize, though prostrate, stain'd. And wav dit round her beauteous brow. And Fancy bid me mark where, o'er Her altar as its flame ascended, Fair laurel'd spirits seem'd to soar, Who thus in song their voices blended "Shine, shine, forever glorious flame, Divinest gift from God to man ! From Greece thy earliest splendor came, To Greece thy ray returns again!

"Take, Freedom, take thy radiant round: When dimm'd revive, when lost return; Till not a shrine on earth be found, On which thy glories shall not burn :"

If we only had a Piano.

'This is pleasant,' exclaimed the young husband tea things were removed. The fire glowed in the grate, revealing a pretty and neatly furnished sitting-room with all the appliances of comfort. The fatiguing business of the day was over, and he sat enjoying, what he had all day been anticipating, the delights of his own fireside. His pretty wife Esther, took her work and sat down by the table.

'It is pleasant to have a home of one's own.' he said, again taking a satisfactory survey of his snug little quarters. The cold rain beat against the windows, and he thought he felt really grateful for all present comforts.

'Now if we only had a piano!' said the wife. Give me the music of your sweet voice before all the pianos in creation,' he declared complimentary, despite a certain secret disappointment that his wife's happiness did not happily chime with his own. Well, but we want one for our friends,' said Esther. Let our friends come to see us, and not to hear piano!' exclaimed the husband. 'But George, every body has a piano, now-a days-we don't go anywhere without seeing a piano,' persisted the wife.

'And yet I don't know what we want one for; ou will have no time to play on one, and I don't ike to hear it.' Why they are so fashionable—I think our room ooks really naked without one. 'I think it looks just right.' I think it looks very naked-we want a piano shockingly, protested Esther, emphatically.

'The husband rocked violently. 'Your lamp smokes, my dear,' he said after a ong pause. When are you going to get an astral lamp? have told you a dozen times how much we need one,' said Esther, pettishly. 'Those will do.' But you know every body, now-a-days, wants ıstral lamps. Those lamps are the prettyest of the kind I evr saw-they were bought at Boston.' But George, I do not think our room is comly; they are so fashionable; why the Dand the B-s, and A-s all have themam sure we ought to. We ought to, if we take pattern by other penple's expenses, and I don't see any reason for that The husband moved uneasily in his chair.

plete without an astral lamp,' said the wife sharp-claimed George. I am sure I should think we could afford it as well as the B-s, and L-s, and many others we might mention-we do not wish to appear mean.'

'We must live within our means, Esther.' ex-

George's cheek crimsoned. 'Mean! I am not mean!' he cried angrily. Then you do not wish to appear so, said the wife. To complete this room, and make it like other's, we want a piano and an astral lamp." "We want-we want!" muttered the husband; here's no satisfying a woman's wants, do what you may!' and he abruptly left the room. How many husbands are in a similar dilemma

How many homes and husbands are rendered uncomfortable by the constant dissatisfaction of a wife with present comforts and pre-ent provisions. How many bright prospects for business have ended in bankruptcy and ruin, in order to satisfy If the cause of many a failure could be made gen of democracy?

known, it would be found to result from useless expenditures at home-expenses to answer the demands of fashion, and what people say of us." 'My wife made my fortune,' said a gentleman of great possessions, by her thrift, prudence, and cheerfulness, when I was first beginning." 'And mine has lost my fortune,' answered h companion bitterly, by useless extravagance, and repining when I was doing well.' What a worlddoes this open to the influence which a wife possesses over the future prosperity of her family !--Let the wife know her influence, and try to use it wisely and well.

Be satisfied to commence small. It is too common for young house-keepers to begin where their mothers ended: Buy all that is necessary to work skillfully with, adorn your house with all that will will render it comfortable. Do not look at richer homes and covet their costly furniture. If secret dissatisfaction is ready to spring up, go a step further and visit the homes of the poor and suffering; and behold dark, cheerless apartments, insufficient clothing, an absence of the comforts and refinements of social life; then return to your own with a joyful spirit. You will then be prepared to meet your husband with a grateful heart, and be ready to appreciate that toil and self-denial which he has endured in his business-world to surround you with all the delights of home; then him in so arranging your expenses, that his mind will not be constantly har seed, lest family expenditures should encroach upon public payments. Be independent; a young house-keeper never needed greater moral courage than she does to resist the arrogance of fashion. Bo not let the A---s and B-s decide what you must have, neither let them hold the strings of your purse. You best know what you can and ought ding-to your means. Let not the censure or the approval of the world ever tempt you to buy what you hardly think you can afford. It matters little and already rises in unticipation from poverty, wo what they think, provided you are true to your- and wretchedness! 5 Once "so was Franklin," self and your family.

Thus pursuing an independent, straight forward, consistent course of action, there will spring up peace and joy all around you. Satisfied and happy yourself, you will make your husband so, and your children will feel the warm and sunny influence. Happy at home, our husband can go out spirit; domestic bickering will not sour his heart, and he will return to you again with a confiding and unceasing love. Depend upon it, beauty, grace, wit, accomplishment, have far less to do with family comfort, than prudence, economy, thrift and good sense. A husband may get tired of admiring, but never with the comfortable consciousness that his receipts exceed his demands.

Power or Words.-The American Review has an article on Words; we make the following extract therefrom:

"All classes appear to depend upon words. Principles are nothing in comparison with speech. A politician is accused of corruption, inconsisteney, and loving number one more than number ten housand. Straightway he floods the country with words, and he is honorably acquitted. A gentleman of far-reaching and purse-reaching intelligence concocts twenty millions of pills, and works' them off to agents, and, in the end, transfers the whole from his laboratory to the stemachs of an injured and oppressed people, by means of-words. Miss A. stabs the spotless name of Mrs. P. with a word stiletto. The poisonous breath of a venomous faes to be sublime, but has no fire in him to give nerveless, witless, and soulless; or his thoughts the most plaintive tones of aspiring stupidity.-Poor poetaster! do not despair! take to thy dicthe Ossa of Hyperbole, and thy small fraction of human being." the Trite shall be exalted to the heights of the Sublime, and the admiring gaze of many people shall be fixed upon it, and the coin shall jingle in thy pocket, and thou shalt be denominated Great! But if thy poor pate be incapable of the daring, even in expression, then grope dubiously in the dismal swamps of verbiage, and let thy mind's finger feel after spongy and dropsical words, out of which little sense can be squeezed, and arrange the cozy epithets and unsubstantial substantives into lines, and out of the very depths of Bathos, thou shalt arise a sort of mud-Venus, and men shall mistake thee for her that rose from the sea sion, passed a law changing the time for holding and the coin shall still clink in thy fob, and thou shalt be called Beautiful! Such is the omnipo; the second Treeday in October as heretofore, the tence of words! They can exalt the little; they can depress the high; a ponderous polysyllable day of November, and continue only one day: will break the chain of an argument, or crack the

And if physiologists and metaphysicians are driven into a corner, and are compelled to give the real distinction between human beings and animals, they are almost sure to say between New York and Philadelphia, have been it consists in the power of speech-in the capacity planted as far up as Union Square in the former to frame, use and multiply at discretion, these om- city, and some considerable progress has been nipotent 'mouthfuls of spoken wind'--Wordswords-words!

DEATH SCENES OF REMARKABLE PERSONS. Sir T. Moore remarked to the executioner, by whose hands he was to perish, that the scaffeld was extremely weak; I pray you see me up safe, said he; 'and for my coming down let' me shift for myself.' Chaucer breathed his last while composing a ballad. His last production is called A ballad, made by Geoffrey Chaucer, on his death bed, lying in great point. I could wish this tragic scene were over, said Quin, the actor ; but I hope to go through it with becoming dignity. -Petrarch was found dead in his library, leaning over a book. Rousseau, when dying, ordered his attendants to remove him; and place him before the window that he might look upon his garden, and gladden his eyes with the sight of nature.-How ardent an admirer he was of nature, is poetically told in Zimmerman's Solitude. Pope tells us he found Sir Godfrey Kneller (when he visited him a few days prior to his end) sitting up and forming plans for his own monument. His vanity was conspicuous even in death! Warren has remarked that Chesterfield's good breeding only left him with death; Give Drysdale a chair, said he to his valet when that person was announced. Bayle, when dying, pointed to the place where his proof sheet was deposited. Clarendon's pen dropped from his hand when he was seized with a palsy which put an end to his existence. Bede died while in the net of dictating. Roscommon. when expiring, quoted from his own translations of Dies Irw. Haller, feeling his pulse, said, 'The artery ceases to beat, and immediately died .--When the priest whom Alfieri had been prevalled on to see, came, he requested him to call to-morrow: Death I trust will tarry four-and-twentyhours.' Noison's last words were, 'Tell Collingswood to bring the fleet to anchor.'-Religious

The former, I perceived by his dress, was of a higher you will be ready to co-operate cheerfully with class of society than his humble yet more dignined companion. The latter was a sprightly, active lad. scarce twelve years old, and coarsely but cleanly attired. But young as he was, there was visible in his countenace much of genius, manly dignity, and determinate resolution-while that of the former showed only fostered pride, and the imagined

MENTAL TRAINERS OF CHILDREN.—There is o doubt that forging the intellect of children, occasions great mischer to their health, although it into the world with a clear head, and self-relying to done in the gentlest manner. This remark has particular reference to scrofulous and rickety children, whose brains are often largely developed and much disposed to mental activity which latter enfeebles the weak condition of the other organs of the body, and instead of being checked by parents, is fostered in every possible way, to the exclusion of all those means which have an invigorating influence upon the frame, and thus creates a premature decay. Educat ged before the fourth or fifth year, and then only f that nature sufficient to call forth the slightest mental efforts; they should be pursued at home, under the guidance of a person possessing good plain sense. The child would then escape the impure atmosphere of the crowded class room and the restraints generally imposed there, which sometimes occasion spinal distortions and undermine Exencise .- Throughout all nature, want of notion indicates weakness, corruption, inanimation and death. Trenck, in his damp prison, leaped about like a lionun his fetters of seventy pounds weight, in order to preserve his health; and an ilnatic moulds itself into syllables, and, lo! a sect of lustrious physician observes: "I know not which christians is struck with leprosy.
