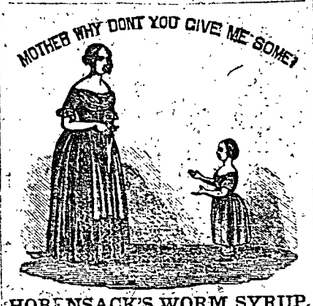
MEDICINES.



HOBENSACK'S WORM SYRUP,

OR THE LITTLE SUFFRER'S FRIEND.

AN entire Vegetable preparation for the destruction of Worms and cure of bowel complaint, free from all deleterious drugs mild and certain in its operation, and remarkably pleasant to take, so much so that children will ask for it after they once get a taste. Remember that Hobensack's Worm Syrup is the one and that all others are base counterfeits; be sure and ask for Hobensack's and see that it has the written signature of J. N. & G. L. Hobensack on the label, pasted on the bottle. The following certificates, are amongst the many in our possession.

PHILADA., Dec. 19th, 1844,

MESSRS. HOBENSACK—In compliance with your request, I send you these few lines, certifying that I obtained a bottle of your Medicated Worm Syrup for my son, a lad 11 years of age, who as I am confident, was severely afflicted with Worms, and surprising to tell, he found immediate relief. I would therefore recommend it to the public as a safe and effectual remedy for children afflicted with Worms.

Yours, &c. Rev JOHN S. EISENBREY.

Eight street, four doors below Green.

PHILADA., March 26th 1844.

This is to certify that some two or three weeks since, two of my children were attacked with Worms—I tried every remedy that I knew of, but to tell of, but without any effect, they were growing worse and worse, until the disease had obtained an alarming and FATAL character; so much so, that I and all who saw them felt satisfied that DEATH would close the scene of relief was not immediately obtained. One of the children presented a fearful picture of diseases and suffering, she was literally alive with worms; her countenance had a pale and death-like hue; her breath was extremely offensive; her frame wore away to a mere skeleton and all the symptoms attendant upon worms were of a highly aggravated character. To such a fearful extent did the disease arrive, that she actually passed worms from her nose, followed by copious and alarming bleeding. It was at this time that I applied to you and obtained a bottle of your Worm Syrup; and I must say, with but little hopes, but wonderful to say, after a few doses, a great change was perceptible, and in a few days to my utter astonishment, the two children passed a large wash basin full of worms; since that time they rapidly recovered, and are now perfectly cured.

Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills

OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COLLEGE of Health.

NO MEDICINE has ever been introduced to the American Public, where virtues have been more cheerfully and universally acknowledged, than the above named

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS.

To descant upon their dignity, at this late day, would seem to be wholly unnecessary, as very few indeed who peruse this article, will be found unacquainted with the real excellency of the medicine. But if further proof is wanting to establish the truth of this assertion, it ought be found in the fact that no medicine in the country has been so

SHAMEFULLY COUNTERFEITED.

Ignorant and unprincipled men have at various places, manufactured a spurious pill; and in order more completely to deceive the public have made it in outward appearance to resemble the true medicine.—The weak people could never pass off their worthless trash, but for the assistance of certain unfeeling store keepers, who because they can purchase the spurious article at a reduced rate, lend themselves to this monstrous system of imposition and crime.

The virtues of the above named Pills, will therefore be another guard against every kind of imposition, and remember the only genuine Agents in Pottsville, are Messrs. T. & J. Beatty.

The following highly respectable store keepers have been appointed Agents for the sale of

RIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, FOR

and of whom it is confidently believed the genuine medicine can with certainty be obtained.

IT has been but a few years since this medicine has been introduced into this country, and has been productive of the most astonishing and unexpected results. As evidenced by certificates of the effects have been in every instance published. It is only necessary now to remind the public where it can be obtained genuine

Throughout Germany it is known as the "Life Preserver," and is the only medicine in use there for the above affections.

It is put up in half pint bottles, with full directions to Cure a Bottle

All Diseases of the Skin?

Of the many thousand bottles, (it is put in bottles with the words "Dr. Leidy's Tetter and Itch Ointment" blown in the side) never has an instance been known or heard from where it had failed. A number of references can be made, where it has been used in schools factories, on board of vessels, and in families, and certificates kept to be published, if they, but for the delicacy in having names published in connection with so loathsome and disagreeable affections.

When is the Time to Die?

BY AMANDA M. EDMOND.

I asked a glad and happy child
Whose hands were filled with flowers,
Whose silvery laugh rang free and wild
Among the vine-wreathed bowers—
I crossed her sunny path, and cried,
"When is the time to die?"
"Not yet! not yet!" the child replied,
And swiftly bounded by.

I asked a maiden; back she flung
The tresses of her hair;
A whispered name was on her tongue,
Whose memory hovered there;
A flush passed o'er her lily brow,
I caught her spirit's sigh—
"Not now," she cried, "O no, not now!
Youth is no time to die."

I asked a mother, as she prest
Her first born in her arms,
As gently on her tender breast
She hushed her babe's alarms.
In quivering tones her answer came,
Her eyes were dim with tears—
"My boy has mother's life must claim,
For many, many years!"

I questioned one in manhood's prime,
Of proud and fearless air,
His brow was furrowed not by time,
Or dimmed by woe and care.
In angry accents he replied,
And gleamed forth scorn his eye,
"Talk not to me of death," he cried,
"For only age should die."

I questioned Age; for him, the tomb
Had long been well prepared,
But death, who withers youth and bloom,
This man of years had spared.
Once more his nature's dying fire
Flashed high as thus he cried,
"Life, only life, is to be desired"—
Then gasped and groaned, and died.

I asked a Christian—answer thou
When is the hour of death?"
A holy calm was on his brow,
And peaceful was his breath;
And sweetly o'er his features stole
A smile, a light divine;
He spake the language of his soul,
"My Master's time is mine."

Ludovico Lana.

AN ANECDOTE OF MODERN SICILY.

In the summer of 1811, I was travelling in Sicily, and in crossing the Island from Girgenti to Palermo, paid a visit to the town of Castrogiovanni, built on the site of the ancient Enna. I was surprised to find how little interest was caused by our arrival, as in most of these classical spots, a host of beggars assail the stranger on one side, as the guides beset him on the other, both eager for prey and for spoils, while the idle and unemployed, (nine-tenths of the population, lounge around to swell the crowd. But on this occasion, we passed almost unnoticed through the streets, and I could scarce bribe a half-naked urchin to direct me to the house of the Abbate, to whom I had an introduction. From the worthy Abbate, however, when at last found, I soon learned the cause of the unusual excitement which thus had changed the general aspect of the ancient town of Castrogiovanni.

A brigand, belonging, it was said, to the band of the celebrated Ludovico Lana, had been arrested, and it was expected that he would make disclosures of great interest when condemned to death, which it was decided that he should be by the judge and other authorities before the trial took place or a question was asked." He had been arrested on the denunciation of a dying man, who had been robbed and mortally wounded on the road between Catania and Castrogiovanni; but the accused stoutly maintained that at the time mentioned he had been employed as a porter at Palermo. Unfortunately, he had neither time allowed nor the means of procuring the attendance of witnesses, and the judge had fully made up his mind beforehand, as is very generally the case, and the sentence was passed just at the time of my entering the town; all the world, therefore, were assembled about the tribunal, and employed in discussing the merits of the case, which accounted for the deserted state of the streets, never at any time crowded with population. Soon after my establishment with my host, my servant returned from the locanda, and congratulated me on my good quarters, more particularly as a very great personage had arrived a short time previous, and who occupied, together with the unfortunate man just condemned, all the thoughts of the innkeeper and his family. I inquired who the great unknown might be, and was told that he was a very handsome young man, about twenty-eight or thirty years of age, in the uniform of an English officer of rank, and attended by two domestics. He had arrived from Palermo: and though from his dress he appeared to be in the English service, yet his accent and dialect were evidently Maltese, which circumstance strongly excited the curiosity of the worthy landlord, whose house was seldom visited by persons of such distinction. The stranger had asked the distance from Castrogiovanni to Palermo, and was told about seventeen miles. He then ordered dinner, and desired his attendants to see to the horses, as he should proceed that evening to the place of his destination. The host ventured to represent to his excellenza the danger of the route, at which the traveller laughed, and asked in what the mighty danger consisted.

"Had his excellenza never heard of Ludovico Lana?" inquired the innkeeper.

"Ludovico Lana! and who may he be?" was the reply.

"Oh, signior! the most terrible brigand in the island, and who just now will be more furious than ever."

"And why so?"

"One of his band has just been arrested and condemned to death, here in Castrogiovanni; and Ludovico is capable of setting fire to the town, and cutting all our throats."

The stranger laughed at the alarm of his informant, and asked when the execution would take place.

"The day after to-morrow, no doubt," replied the host.

"And at what hour?"

"Eight in the morning, excellenza, is the usual hour."

"I have a great curiosity to see the execution," observed the officer.

"Nothing is easier; your excellenza can return hither from Palermo to-morrow evening, and I will take care to provide a good place for you to witness the execution of this bandit. I have the honour to be acquainted with the judge, and can, I doubt not, procure you a seat by him."

"Just the thing," replied the stranger. "I will return to-morrow night, and in the mean time you will take care to make the proper arrangements."

My servant then went on to narrate the wonder of the host when about to prepare the table for his guest, at learning from the servants that they carried with them various articles of plate and linen for their master's service, who was not accustomed to the rude furniture of a Sicilian locanda, and saw with amazement the preparations made for his accommodation. His curiosity, being excited to the highest degree, he contrived to learn that the stranger was a Maltese, enormously rich, who had obtained a high rank in the English service, and was called Colonel Sancta Croce.

The colonel soon after started, as he had said, for the residence of his friend, Prince Paterno, leaving one of his servants with part of his baggage at the locanda, purposing to return the next night to be in readiness to witness the execution. Meanwhile the host of the White Cross had informed not only his friend the judge, but all the town, of the great personage who had become his guest, detailing his magnificence with no little exaggeration, and easily obtaining a promise of the place he sought to witness the execution. During the whole of the intervening day the only subjects of discussion in the town where the arrival of this great person at the white cross, and the approaching event, many believing the assertions of innocence so stoutly maintained by the accused, from whom his confessor had obtained no avowal of guilt. The confessor himself seemed inclined to believe in the protestations of the condemned. At night another monk had an interview with him in the chapel where he was to pass the last hours of his existence, and remained with him till past eleven o'clock, declaring when he left him that he did not believe him to be guilty, and promising to pray for his deliverance. After this visitor had departed, the penitent seemed more tranquil and resigned than he had been at intervals during the day.

At midnight Colonel Sancto Croce arrived as he had promised at the locanda, and seemed perfectly satisfied with the arrangement he was informed his host had made for him to witness the spectacle of the next day. During the whole night the bells of all the churches and convents were tolled, to keep the good people of the town in mind of their duty to pray for the condemned; and at daybreak crowds began to assemble, and the peasantry to arrive from the neighbourhood. At seven o'clock the judge and other officials took their stations on a platform prepared for them, and were joined soon after by Colonel Sancta Croce, who was received with all the attention his wealth and rank demanded.
