Because ye are the most like Heaven;
God shield your eyes of bonny blue!

ELECTIONEERING ANECDOTE.-A good story is told of a Mississippi candidate for Congress, showing, we suppose, that as in war, 'all is fair in politics, as Major Noah, in fact contends .-The story is of two opposing rivals for Congressional honor, at present canvassing the same district. One of them-the one of whom the joke is particularly told—is said to be a perfect "wheelhorse' in the way of stump-speaking, throwing in the big licks,' telling long yarns,' &c.

The other is represented as a gentleman, of great refinement, and completely fascinating every one with the suavity of his manners and the friendliness and familiarity of his address: in fact · _in individual electioneering, he is 'hard to beat.' At this game he was rather getting aheal of his stump-speaking rival,-travelling all over the disrict, and stopping everybody he met, and having a long and friendly chat. His opponent became aware of all that was going on, and being convinced that he could not stand the silent and secret electioneering of his friend, resolved on the following way of checking his influence.

While riding alone one day ahead of his rival about a quarter of a mile, he met a tall, verdantlooking son of the soil, leading an ox, and accosted him thus: 'Good' morning friend: about a quarter of a mile back, you will meet with middle-sized, middle-aged man, riding a bald-faced sorrel horse. I wish you to avoid speaking to him and to give him the road. He is very cruzy, and imagines that he is really a candidate for Congress, and if you talk to, or question Bim at all on the subject, he becomes perfectly furious and eren dangerous. I have him in charge, and do hope my friend, that you will yield him the road, and have no conversation with him, whatever. In due time the countryman met with the middlesized man,' and as the latter was about address sing him with the greatest politeness imaginable he scampered off into the bushes, leaving ox and all, like a quarter horse!

Ding your Buirisa Goin.'-- About the time matters and things in the specie line were interes ting in Natchez, we saw a sucker from the landing, an Illinise, who had just sold the last load of corn, call at the Planters' Bank to obtain specie for his bills.

Handing them to the accomplished teller, he said: 'Stranger, I don't want nothin' but the specie funds-gold of you've got it; ef not, the specie itself."

Mr. ____, with his usual grace, counted out the four hundred in sovereigns, and handed them over; the fellow picked one up, examined it closely, read the stamp on both sides and handing

'Ain't that British gold, stranger?' We informed him that it was, but that it was as current as American gold or silver.

O! replied he, 'you don't fool me, young ma -Dirn your British Gold! I don't take anything British, no how; I've got a kind of pizen feeling gin anything in that line-Dirn your British Gold! You must think I'm a fool-it ain't redeemable no whars but in the Bank or England, and I ain't a gwoin there to git it changed-Dirn your British Gold! Three cheers for Illiniec!' - Concordia Intell gencer.

WITTY RETORT .- Sir John Elliott, as is well known was a merry eccentric little being who talked pretty much at random, and oftentimes with no great reverence for the subject he talked

On one occasion he called up a patient. Henderson the celebrated actor, to acquire how his medicine had succeeded, and in his northern accent demanded of his patient:

"Had he taken the pills that he sent him!" ·He had. Well and how did they agree! what had they done !" 'Wonders,' replied Henderson, A have survived

'To be sure you have said the doctor, and you must take more of them, and live forever

I make my patients immortal.' 'That is exactly what I'm afraid of doctor,' rejoined the patient.

GENUINE ELOQUENCE .- One man, whom, I saw sitting on the ground, leaning his back against the wall, attracted my attention by a degreee of squalor in his appearance, which I had rarely observed even in Ireland. His clothes were ragged to indecency-a very common circumstance, however with the males-and his face was pale and sickly. He did not address me and I passed by; but having gone a few paces, my heart smote mo and I turned back: If you are in want, said I with some degree of peevishness, 'why do you not beg ?' Sore its begging I am,' was the reply.

'You did not utter a word!' No! is it joking you are with me, Sir! Look there!' holding up the tattered remnant of what had once been a coat; 'Do you see how the skip is speaking through the holes of my trousers, and the bones crying out through my skin! Look at my sunken cheeks, and the famine that's staring in my eyes! Man alive! isn't it begging I am with a hundred tongues !'- Leigh Ritchie's Ire-

What a Farmer Wants. The Farmer wants a stable mind,
A purpose sure and steady,
To patient industry inclined—
For business always ready. Good careful babas well infixed,

He wants a neat and prudent wife, Who when he carns, can save it, Who kindly smooths the cares of life, (Best gift of him who gave it.) He wants a snug and tidy farm, And health and strength together; A house and harn to keep all wars: In cold or rainy weather.

Heaven's blessing then must crown the whole, or all his hopes are blasted;
But with this resting on his soul,
The purest joys are tasted. He then enfoys a bliss unknown

APPLES FOR Hoos .- Mr. Editor :- I have kep my hogs on apples every fall an winter for ten years past. I put rather more meal with my ap ples than people usually do when they boil potatoes but not enough to keep the hogs slive if they had no apples. My hogs usually look better in the spring than any of my neighbor's, that are fed on potatoes. In fact they thrive and keen fat all winter. I lay my apples in a large bin in my hog pen, let them freeze when the weather becomes very cold, then cover them up with rye straw and keep them frozen all winter. When I want to use them, I put them on my stove in a large pot or kettle, let them be on just long enough to take the frost out of them and feed them to the hogs warm. Some people only turn warm water on them and thus take out the frost. Boiling or thawing them takes the sourness or acid all out of them, and. enders them more palatable and nourishing. I give each hog one third of a pailful of apples at a time, three times a day. If I fed them on pota toes, I should give them nearly as many in quanuty, as I do apples; therefore, I think a bushel of apples is worth nearly as much for hogs as a busher of potatoes. It is my opinion that our farmers had better set out more orchards rather than cut downwhat they now have. The old orchards are so fast going to decay in this vicinity, and the rising generation will want for apples unless there are more trees set out soon. HORACE GOODUCE. P. S. I feed good mellow sour, and some sweet apples to my hogs in the fall, both to my fat hogs and shoats, every day, and think that they both make them grow and help towards fatting them.-

Albany Cultivator.

Westminister, Vt., Oct. 9, '45. To Make Sausages .- Proportion your meat about half fat and half lean; cut it fine; then to one hundred pounds of most add two and a quarterpounds of salt, ten ounces sage, and ten ounces. ground pepper made tine. Warm the meat, and, mix them in thoroughly and stuff them, and the thing is done right. If any wish to keep them. through the summer good and fresh, put them in a clean firkin, melt fat, and pour on enough to cover them; cover the vessel and set it in, a cel-.

lar, and they will keep good the year round. ANOTHER MODE Prepare the sausage meat in the usual way. Then instead of putting themeat in skins, make bags of white linen or cotton cloth—as large, say, as a man's arm, and about ___ a feet long-stuff those bags with the sausage meat, and hang them up to dry. When wanted THE ROOM FORMERLY OCCUPIED BY MRS. PHILLIPS IN CENTRE STREET.

The subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Fortsville-and the public in general, that he has just onceded, and cut into slices of convenient thickness of the property ness for cooking. By this, way, much labor is saved, and the cooking quicker done .- Emigrant's Hand Book. A LITTLE FARMER. - The Mass. Ploughman, in speaking of the assistance which farmers receive from their children says "three years ago we saw a man ploughing in Concord, with oxen and a horse. His only assistant was a little son four years of age. He role the horse and guided the team. He was so small that his prudent father, Mr. Tuttle, a very good farmer, lashed him fast to the saddle, and here be eaught the healthy breezes of sump ad a good appetite for plain and wholesom 1; while he was kept away from the idle's aischevious company of village boys and willing toungers." DEPTH OF ROOFS. In light subsoils the roots of trees have found a depth of ten or twelve feet. Roots of the Canda thistle have here traced six or seven feet below the surface. Wheat, in a rich mellow soil will strike roots three feet downward, and much farther horizontally. The roots of oats. have been discovered eighteen inches from the stemand the long, thread like roots of grass still farth ... er. The fine roots of the onion, being white and easily traced in black soil, have, in trenched soil been found two foet deep. The importance of mellow soil for these fine roots to penetrate, is obvious. CURING PORK .-- In running over the October number of the Cultivator, I noticed what I prosume, to most of your readers, is a rather new method of preserving pork. You request, if others have practiced the same method, to give information of the results. I have for the last four years practiced the same method with the slight difference of letting it remain unpacked until the animal heat is all exhausted; then pack it with, Turk's Island or rock salt, and pour on the brine boiling hot. I likewise heat my pickle for my hams the same way. I think it a decided improvement-it makes pork and hams very tender and of excellent flavor, and keeps them sweet the year round. It is almost universally practiced in my neighborhood with the best results.

PROSPER ELITHARP. Bridgport, Vt., October 10, 1846.

KEEPING MANURE COVERED .- An experiment conducted by the President of an Argicultural Society in England, shows that manure which was kept covered by nine inches in depth with earth, so that no evaporation escaped, produced four bushels more of grain per acre, than the same quantity and kind of manure, applied to the same, extent and quantity of land, but which had lain. from the 13th of January to the 4th of April, exposed to the weather. CURE FOR HORN AIL -As a remedy for this disease, some apply Spirits of Turpentine, but this we have considered too harsh. An application of brimstone-say one spoonful turned boiling hot into the cavity, just between the horns, will effect: a speedy cure. DE. FOUNTAYNE'S CHINESE HAIR ERADICAS 1) TOR.—Which removes Superfluous Hair from the Face Neck, forehead, &c. For sale at MARTNIIO. Drug Store. March 15.
