MARSH'S SUPERIOR PATENT nanures. I can say little more on this subject, at this time, than give the opinion that we man-nage the whole affair in a most wasteful and un-TRUSS scientific manner generally. Instead of saving carefully every solid and liquid substance about our premises, and by combining them with bog muck; the sediments of boys and ditches, paring from the road side, loam from the woodlands, and decaying vegetables, making them leven the whole lump, with the addition of ashes, soot, plaster, lime, salt, &c., we suffer thousands of loads to be Dr. Joseph White's Utero ...bdominal Supporters. expased to the sun and rains, which dissipate the supply of the above articles, just received nost valuable portions, and impoverish our means he manufacturers prices, by JOHN S. of prosperity. Every family who uses a barrel of soft soap in a year, may staturate two cords or four ox cart loads of loam with suds and filth of the wash room, which would be a good top dressing to an acre of grass land or half an acre of wheat. I could speak of other wastes which happen about almost every house, which if they were saved and properly composted, would manute in the State of Maine, 10,000 acres of wheat. In China almost no cattle are kept, and no dependance is placed in barn-yard manure. Their sole resort is to compost, formed from the refuse matter around human dwellings, and the most of that land which i sustains 300,000,000 human beings, is a garden. -Dr. Bates' Ad.

Asnes on Line AROUND Posts. - Where the articles are plenty and cheap, it is good economy, to put some lime or ashes around the posts of fences to prevent rotting. In some dry soils, posts will become so rotten in four or five years that they are easily, broken off at the surface of the ground, while the tops last for fifty years. It seems proper, therefore, to take some care to prevent the rapid decay of posts just at the sur-face of the soil, where they are most exposed to alternate moisture and drought. It is this frequent alternate moisture and drought, at to this insures, wetting and drying that couses such rapid decay ; for posts set in a wet meadow will hold sound at the bottom longer than at the top. And posts in a moist clayey soil will last three times as long as in a dryish gravel of sand. Posts kept perfectly of the ground and they assist in weakening the timber. Perhaps it is owing to this that ashes are so useful in proserving the posts when set in the round

Whether it will pay cost to place some substan-res as ashes, lime, charcoal or cinders around the foot of posts in common or cheap fences, each owner can determine. But in a costly garden fence we are fully satisfied that much may be as ved. Any kind of posts will last twice as long in dry ground, with ashes about the bottom of it, as GUANO .- One of the strongest rec tions of this manure, consists in the small com-pa s of bulk and weight, which renders cheap and easy the transportation to any distance of a great amount of fertilizing power. A calculation has been made by a careful and discreet farmer near Petersburg, to show that guano, at the rate of even 400 pounds the streng during in the rate of wear 400 pounds the streng (a very liberal allowance.) does not cost, at $3 per hundred, more than half as much as the stable manure required to produce the same results, at only 25 cants for the two horse wagon load; when hauled from one and a half se three miles.
