CULTURE OF CIBEAGE. The cabbage crop very important one in the vicinity of cities in immense quantities are raised there; but we dout whether as much attention is paid to the culto of this vegetable on the farm as there should of this vegetable on the larm as there should be considering its importance as food for both man and beast. It is true that in consequence of the severity of the weather of the Northern Sats (cabbage being a very watery vegetable,) it is no as profitable to feed to stock as in the milder win as prolitable to feed to stock as in the university ter climate of Great Britain; and, in addition to this, it is more difficult to keep with us, and more difficult to keep with us, and more difficult to store. Nevertheless, for food for caldifficult to store. Trevertness, not took for catand before the severity of the winter sets in few vegetables can excel it. Then, such an immense quantity can be raised per acre where the gibent is favorable for the crop and it is so easily colin. ted, it is quite an inducement for those who have but a small quantity of land to devote a few acre-

Grown in this way the heads are said to he much larger and finer than when the young cabbages are tran-planted, as it is contended that however carefully the proceess may be performed, the plant receives a check in its incipient state which it never course recovers. I here is reason and philosophy in this, and we should be glad if those engaged in the culture of cabbages would make experiments the present season between different rows, side by side, sowing the seed as above, and in the usual method, and then transplant.

> TREATMENT OF SHEAP AFTER SHEARING, -A correspondent of the Albany Cultivator save. The directions for a Compound for smeaning sheep, that is given in in your last number, leads me to make the following remarks respecting the the treatment of sheep generally after sl. o mig. -There is nothing that conduces to the health and comport of sheep at this season more than a chan skin; any application that has that tendency will be of service; any thing to the contrary must injure hem, and the growth and quality of her wool, in a greater or less degree. Smearing of any kind is injurious at any season, but particularly so after shearing, when the wool is shor; it stops the pores, checks the growth of the wool, and leaves it dry and brittle, far into the season f when sheep are sheared, there is a large hogshead of very strong brine made, and as the sheep are shorn they taken to it, and while one man holds the sheep, another takes a strong scrubbing brush, such as floors are scrunbed with, and after pouring some of the brine along the back and shoulders, he scrubs the sheep well all over, until he raises a lather as with soap; nothing more is necessary. The skin will be left bright, red and clean. Every tick and sheep louse instantly dis-appears; and if the skin had any tendency to juch, t is entirely cured; perspiration is promoted and the growth of wool improved. In this war, I think that the gene al strength of the sheep to withstand effects of any storm, will be better pro-moted than by smearing of any kind, which is never admissable. Whenever this simple and cheap plan is once adopted, its effects are so obyous that it will never be neglected by the good sheperd, any season after at shearing time."

> PEAR TREES .- At a meeting of the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture, held on the 7th ult., Samuel C. Ford made the following statement as to his method of improving the fluit of the pear tree. He said: "From experience, I can state the advantage to be derived from the application of Iron to the roots of pear trees. It is known to all naturalists, that iron enters largely 1+ a component part into the fruit of the pear thee f and as many of our choicest varieties have very much deteriorated, I feel it a duty to state that my fruit has been much improved, and some that were almost worthless, restored t the frost will admir, I have my trees dug round the distance of three feet, baring the upper roots, and then have applied a bushel or more of cinders from a blacksmith's shop-old iron would be better. This oxydises by the rains of the season, and is taken up in the sap as it ascends in the spring. This is a simple experiment, and one that will be righly prized by all the lovers of line fruits." Fine Houses. The little city of Lowell is getting to be another-Richmond in the beauty of its horses, some of which have gained regal attenton on foreign shores. The Lowell Courier states tion on foreign shores. The Lowell Courier states that only a year since, a beautiful pair of well matched light-greys were owned and driven through the streets of that city by Rodney Parker, Equ. which age now caparisoned, with gold lace, pearls, and precious stones, and are now attached to a chapital in which a matched. chariot in which is scated a prince of the blood in all the dazzling splendor of oriental magnificence, mo ing majestically through the streets of Calculati These horses, says the Courier, were sold by Mr. Parker to a gentleman in Boston to be shipped, for $600, and the consignee, before they reached the wharf in Calcutta, was offered $1500! for them and refused it. They were 120 days on their passage out, perfectly healthy during all this long toyage, and were the first American horses ever exported to that far country.

IMPORTED SAXON SHEEP .- Four Saxon Bucks and four ewes have just arrived at this port in the ship Atlantic from Bremen. These superb animals were selected from the celebrated Electoral flocks in Saxony, by John A. Tuinter, Esq., lof Hartford, Conn.; one of the best judges of sheep and wool in this country. He was assisted in his choice by Baron de Spreck, director of the flock. These are by far the largest and best formed Saxon sheep we ever saw. Their fleeces are remarkably fine and even, and will shear very heavy.-They were purchased for Mr. Samuel C. Scoville, of Salisbury, Conn., for the improvement of his present large flock of native saxons. We onsider this importation as very important to the county, and trust that Mr. Scoville will reap a
