DENTISTRY.

DENTISTRY. S. R. DICKSON and Dr. M. DEPULY, Dental Sur-segues, respectivily inform the 'citizens of Potts-ville and vicinity, that they have established an office in this place, where they will be pleased to see their friends and others with owish dental operations perfor-fued, equal to the hest done in Philadelphia, and far better than is done by a great majority of dentists there. In consequence of a very large amount of business-with which they are favered, they are enabled to ope-rate for prices which are not surreasonably high, thus placing within the reach of all the means of preserving their teeth, which are so necessary to beauty, health and happiness. They are prepared to perform the largest operations at very short notice, such as the constructing of at-mospheric pressure, and double setts with spiral spirals, and also artificial plates. Office North side of Market, a few doors above Cen-tte street.

An hour-glass, too, he down did throw, From off a writing stand, Forgetting that with men below, Time funs away with sand,

A cup of tea was standing near," Of which he longed to sip, Its name caused him to quake with fear For it was called cat-nip.

Then up the stairs his footsteps sped And searched the landing o'er, At length by treachyrous fate misled. He entered the cliamber door.

Ah ! luckless wight he scaled his doom When he that threshold passed, For there within that fatal room . He was doomed to breathe his last.

The noise he made soon woke the pair, A:noise too well they knew. " That rat," cries Mr. T. "is here, His deeds he'll dearly rue."

A cudgel then he took in hand And quickly closed the door, Then carefully! the room he scanned, At length the rat he saw, When he with fury at him made, Resolved the rat to kill.

While-Mrs. T. did lend her aid, And-raised the war cry shrill.

Now here, now there, the battle raged, Hot grew the deadiy strife, While the poor rat no contest waged, But ran to save his life.

When T. at his devoted head Aimed'a most deadly stroke But missed the rat, and in its stead The table leg he broke.

With tenfold vengeence now inspired, Again the war begain. The wretched rat worn out and tired

Behind a bureau ran. Awhile the bureau's friendly shade Kept his dread foe at bay. But soon he lost its sheltering aid,

For it was moved away. Alas ! poor rat 'twas all no go,

To escape in vain he tried, Beneath a fell and deadly blow, He struggled, squealed, and died.

No coffin his poor breast confined Nor in a shroud they wound him,:

But in the gutter he reclined Wich the flies all buzzing 'round him.

With joyful hearts, they threw him down And there ends my sad story, -

He lays upon the cold wet stone, In mud but n t in glory.

THE ART OF RISING.-The Duke of Gram-

mont was the most adroit and witty coultier of his day. His eminence was amusing himself jumping close-legged against the wall. | To surprise a prime minister in so boyish an occupation, was dangerous, and a less skillful courfier might have entered brickly, and cried, 'I'll bet you a 'hundred crowns, that I jump higher than your cminence;' and the Duke and the Cardinal began to jump for their lives. Grammont took good care to jump a few inches lower than the Cardinal; and was six months afterward a Marshal of France.
