FAMINE AND FREIGHTS IN 1801.-In the year 1801, (says the N. Y. Jour. of Com.) the ship Manhattan, belonging to Frederick Rhine-lander, was put up for freight to Liverpool.—
Jonathan Ogden put on hoand 400 hoxes of Havanel sugar at two guineas freight per box, and Daniel Ludlow 6000 bbls, of flour at one guinea, or 21s. freight per bil. William Pitt was then Prime Minister of England, and a famine raged in that country. The Prime Minister issued any order engaging to pay £4 10s, or $21 per barrel for every barrel of American flour which should be brought to England with full liberty to the importer to get a higher mercantile price if possible. The bakers of England were prohibited from selling breat on the day it was baked, becanse state bread was thought more nutritious than new. At that time the entire British army and gentlemen generally, wore their hair in queues. or clubs, and highly powdered. The Duke of Bedford; who was considered the re-hest subject in England, set the example of cutting off his hair to save the flour waisted in powder, and the example was followed by general orders throughout the whole army. This we get from the soldest inhabitant," and it shows that there is nothing new under the sun. .

Farmers' Department.

HAULING OUT MANURE. We feel that we need hardly remind the careful busbandman, that he should loose no time in getting his manure in place on the fields where it may be needed for his corn and other spring crops; but we must be excused for saying, that no farmer should omit improving every opportunity of adding to his manure piles and of preserving them from the injurious effects of the sun and rain when formed. It is an easy matter to give them a covering of a few inches of earth, which will be sufficient to keep in the enriching gases, which would otherwise be lost, while earth thus spread over the piles, will become impregnated with the fertilizing principles of the masses as to be converted into excellent manure. And while we are on this branch of our monthly talk, we would be permitted to enjoin it as an imperative duty upon our brotheren, to make extra efforts to secute ample supplies of manure for their corn grounds. Corn as they are aware now commands good prices, ranging in the neighborhood of a dollar a bushel. with every prospect of its continuing for some time, if not years, to come. In Europe, with the exception of Russia, the grain crops signally failed last year. In England, Ireland and Scotland, superadded to the failure of the grain crojs was that of the Potato, a crop so far as the population of those countries are concerned, of more moment than that of Wheat, Barley or Oats, as its the food upon which the laborers have hitherto chiefly solvisted. It is not within our power to tate what the deficiency of the grain crops of England amounted to in 1846, but it inust have been immease, it we are to judge by the dreadful accounts of starvation, which each steamer brings of the resple of Ireland, and the unexampled effor the people of relation, and the discample of forts miking not only by the people, but by the government of England, to import from abroad, so up ent is the necessity, and so disproportioned the means within the command of private entertainty. erprise, that facilities of importing bread stuffs and provisions through the medium of the commercial marine, that it is in contemplation to employ a portion of the naval marine for that pur-This extraordinary application of both inpose. This extraordinary application or commedividual and governmental enterprise to the same object, proves conclusively that the end of 1847 will show a deficiency in the means of subsistence far beyond anything at which it had arrived in former years. Such being the present and prospective state of thing in Europe, we loose nothing in saxing that we shall find a market there for a very large portion of our surplus agricultural products not only during this, but through several succeeding years, as she has entered upon this year without a surplus on hand, and cannot fail, from the very nuture of the circumstances in which she is placed, so to enter-upon the year 1848. Hence the demand for our corn and wheat will be continued. For Corn, we believe our market will be continued long, very long, after famine; the cause that has brought it into hotice, will have ceased, and necessity will

into notice, will have ceased, and necessity will have established its well deserved reputation, as a pleasant and highly infititious article of food—an article capable of being rendered palatable, in so many forms, to tempt the human appetite to indulgence—an article so full of all the flesh and fat forming principles, as to give it a passport to popularity in the slapes of the opulent country gentlementand titled feeders of cattle, as well as with the page habitale class of stall feeders. with the more humble class of stall feeders. With such prospects luring them to industry exertion and enterprise, we trust that the corngrowers of our land will put forth their every energy to accumulate full supplies of manure, in order that the labor bestowed upon their corp, crops may not be in vain. Corn like all other plants of rapid growth, requires to be fed profusely .-- With such feeding and culture, it is competent to produce a greater amount of grain twice told, than almost any other of the cereal family-but if poorly fed and indifferently tended on ungenerous soil their is no crop more wretchedly miserly. in its yield - none so well calculated to wear outhuman patience, or bring the cultivator sooner to Sowing Grass Seeps .- So soon as the frost is out of the earth, and the ground sufficiently dry to be ploughed without injury, all kinds of gress seeds may be sown—as Timothy, Herd's grass, Orchard grass, Rye grass, and Lucerne. A practice prevails in some parts of our country of sowing Timothy and Clover seed together. The prac-1 75 the we think a bad one Clover flowers, and is 3 50 lit to cut several weeks before Timothy, and is, therefore, ill suited to be grown with it on the same field. We would always sow Timothy seed alone. With regard to the quantity of seed we would remark, that less than a peck per acre should never, he sown, and that a peck and a half per acre, could very advantageously be used on that space of ground. Clover and Orchard grass, though they do not flower at the same time, may be sown together, with a decided improvement both for pasture and hay. When they are sown together, the Clover must direct the judgment as to the proper time of cutting for hay. So soon as the Clover is in bloon, without looking at the state of the Orchard grass, it is time to cut. When thus sown together, 12 lbs. of Clover seed and I bushel of Orchard grass should be sown on each acre. Pastures thus sown are much better than when Clover is alone sown thereon, as cattle are measureably exempt from contracting the disease called the hoven.-The quantity of hay which may be grown on an acre is greater, while the quality is better. A very good compound of grass seed for hey or pasture may be formed of Clover seed, Orchard grass seed, and Perennial Rye grass seed. When sown together, 12 lbs. of the former and 1 bushel of each of the latter should be sown per acre.

As to Shoring, the author maintains that five pails driven on one side of the shoe is sufficient : the result of 15 months experience has proved satislactorily to his mind that shoes thus fastened are held firmly and easily to the feet, the clinches not having in a single instance risen-a clear proof that the struggle between the expansion of the foot and the resistence of the shoe is entirely overcome by this mode of fastening. This very desirable end appears to be attained in the following manner:-The outer side of the foot being the only part nailed to the shoe, carries the whole shoe with it at every expansion; while the inner side being unattached, expands independently of it, whereby all strain poon the nails is avoided, and the foot is left with respect to its power of expansion, as nearly as a basible in a state of nature.

By this method of shoeing, the author had cured corns which had existed on the feet of one of his horses for ten years. The book treats the nonse's roor and the subject of snorrs in a philosophical manner; and enters into every minutia connected with the anatomy of the first, while his theoretical and practical views of the latter, are so allied to common sense and reason that they chal-

Before you allow them to feel the effects of fite, plunge the whole, or as much of the frozen plant as is practicable, into cold water, and keep it under until it has thawed, which will easily be known by its becoming flaccid—then place it where it will warm gradually, as sudden heat will cau e it to die. So treated, the most hardy will recover immediately -others will loose their leaves, or even die down to the ground-and some are so tender that the slightest frost will kill them-but generally they will put forth with fresh vigor after a reason of rest, and gratefully repay your care. Water sparingly until the leaf-buds are well grown, increasing the quantity when they ex-
