The prominent objection urged against him is, that being a successful iron-master, he is unfit to hold office. Now, his success, instead of being an objection, is really a strong argument in his no ordinary character-those of his own age who claim more than equal mental endowments are far in the rear. If Gen. Irvin had acquired his property by undue means, or in any other way than by his own honest, patient industry—if he applied it to selfish or improper purposes-or If he prided himself upon being a we I by man-the objection might have some force; but the fact is ust the reverse. No man in the country applies greater proportion of his property to benevo tent, and charitable purposes-there is no one more public spirited, or who keeps his capital more actively employed-and, moreover, no one is more truly republican in his sentiments and practice may safely assert, without the fear of contradiction, that he has never been applied to in vain, to contribute to any public or charitable object. He has always responded liberally, and cheerfully to such calls. But it has been said that he gives from selfish motives; merely to carry favor as a politician. This, however, is far from the truth. It is well known that benevolence is a prominent trait in his character, and that it was his constant practice to give liberally long before he was ever thought of as a candidate for office. As a further proof of the falsity of this charge, the writer knows of instances of his benevolence of which the public are ignorant and will over remain so if his wishes are not disregarded. I would not have made this allusion were it not that the opposite party through their organ, are constantly attributing his benevolence to sinister motives. But it has been said that Gen. Irvin is an aristocrat. This is the most silly and indiculous charge to make against one who is farthest removed from anything approaching aristocracy. I know that numerous letters have been written to remote parts of the State, giving the most lively and graphic descriptions of 'palaces,' 'palisades, splendid equipage," 'costly furniture,' and numer ous et celeras. I understand from the contents o these letters that it is desired that 'the public shall nfer that he is a purse-proud aristocrat. If such in impression is sought to be made thereby, it may be well enough to give a true statement of his style of living as it has been, and as it now is. For several years after he became a house holder, he was the tenant of a one story log house that had been built for the accommodation of a miller truth there is in the Locofoco statements in regard

The election resulted in giving Gen. Irvin a majority of 410 votes in the district. In 1843, after a full opportunity had been afforded to test his merits; again appeared before the people as a candidate for re election, and was opposed by Gen. McCulough, who had been elected over him in 1839.

The result of this election fully proved his growing popularity and the approbation of his previous ourse by his constituents, his majority being 1336 votes. It is well worthy of remark that in 1838 this district was the only one -which the Whig vote for Congressman exceeded the vote for Governor. But his popularity within his own county, which has always been considered one of the strongholds of Democracy, is still more remarkable. In 1840, Gen. Wilson's majority in Centre county over Gen. VM. MOBTIMORE, MAS. W. CLEMENA OSEPH WEAVER, ACOB KLINE, T. TAYLOB, It is the prerogative of genius to confer a measure of itself upon inferior intelligences. In reading the works of Milton, Bacon, and Newton, thoughts greater than the growth of our own minds are transplated into them; and feelings more profound, sublime, or comprehensive, aro insinuated amidst, our ordinary train ; while, in learn a new language, worthy of the new ideas created in us. By habitual communion with superior spirits, we not only are enabled to think their thoughts, speak their dialect, feel their emo-standard, yet by keeping company with them, we shall rise above our own; as frees growing in the society of a forest are said to draw each other reach their full stature, luxuriance, or beauty.-J.
