Valuable Steam Mill &c., for Sale IN PORT-CARBON.

THE subscriber offers for sale his STEAM MILL, situated in the town of Port. Carbon, Schuylkill county. The mill is built of stone 32 by 40 feet, three stories high, with a one story stone entending across the river Schuylkill, for storing grain &c. The mill has three run of stones, and an excellent engue. Also a landing 95 feet front on the Schuylkill Canal, at the head of the Navigation, extending back to the Schuylkill Valley Rail Road, on which is erected a large store house, stables, and a cooper shop. All the buildings including the mill &c., are in excellent condition, and furnished in the best manner.

This property is situated at the head of Canal Navigation, and at the junction of the Mill Creek and Schuylkill Valley Rail Roads, a branch of which runs within 20 feet of the door of the mill. Boats by the Canal run directly under the mill, and discharge their cargoes of grain &c., through hatchways into the mill above, or on the landing below.

All the flour and offals can be disposed of at the mill door at the bishest waster the state.

All the flour and offals can be disposed of at the mill door at the highest market price, as fast as manufactured, and, when taken into consideration that it is the only mill located in that portion of the Coal Basin, accessary both by Canal and Rail Road, and connecting with the Mill Creek and Schuylkill Valley Rail Roads, so that grain can be received and the products disposed of at the door, without any transportation, it is, unquestionably, one of the most desirable mill properties ever effered for sale. The terms will be made easy to the As the subscriber has made arrangements to engage

As the substitute has made arrangements to engage in another business, if not sold in a reasonable time, it will be offered for rent.

The Spider's Thread .- That any creature could be found to fabricate a net, not less ingenious than that of the fisherman, for the capture of its prey; that it should fix it in the right place, and then patiently await the result, is a proceeding so strange that, if we did not see it done daily before our eyes by the common housespider and garden-spider, it would seem wonder-ful. But how much is our wonder increased when we think of the complex fabric of each aingle thread, and then of the mathematical precis-ion and rapidity with which, in certain cases, the net itself is constructed; and to add to all this, as an example of the wonders which the most common things exhibit when carefully examined, the net of the garden-spider consists of two distinct kinds of silk. Threads forming the concentric circles are composed of a silk much more clastic than that of the rays, and are studded over with minute globules of a viscid gum, sufficiently ad- Thave you read this little, spirited affair before ?. hesive to retain, any unwary fly which comes incontact with it. Streets of Jerusalem .- I went this day To see some of the principal streets in the centre of the city. They are five or eix in number, and from one hundred and fifty to two hundred yards each in length. There are no private- houses among them, all being shops and places of business. The shops are generally about six feet in front, and the floors are raised three feet from the level of the street, to which there are no steps. There are no windows, either with or without glass, but the door fills up the entire front; half of it down, and extending a little way into the street, serves for lying goods upon. The shopman sits cross-leg-ged on the floor and never rises to serve his customer, who stands in the street without; nor need he, for all his goods lie upon shelves within his reach. The streets are not more than from six to eight feet wide, so than when the shops are open it is rather difficult for people to pass each other in the business part of the town. The streets are neither flagged nor paved, but there are laid some large flat stones for the people to walk or step upon in wet weather; which are worn so smooth and slopping by the number of naked feet which trend upon them, that no one can walk safely and look at the shops at the same time; for between slippery stones and deep holes, one has to look well to his movements, lest he should come down.-Lowthian's Visit to Jerusalem.

In the notice of Leigh Hunt's "Men, Women and Books," is the following exquisite rondsan, which has, (says the reviewer) beside its own excellence, the additional interest of being the offspring of a real impulse, and of chomicling the loving audacity of one of the most charming of women:

Romances.-It is probable that of all the cruses which have injured the health of women, the principal has been the prodigious multiplication of romances during the last century. From the cradle to the most advanced age, they read them with an eagerness which keeps them almost without motion and without sleep. A young girl, instead of running about and playing, reads, percresful cultivation of this plant in the United States petually reads, and at twenty becomes full of vapors, in-tead of being qualified for the duties of a good wife or nurse. These causes, which influence the physical equality, influence the moral man. I have known persons of both sexes, whose constitutions would have been weakened gradually by the too strong impressions of impassioned writings. The most tender romances hinder marriages instead of promoting them. A woman, while her heart is warmed by the langour of love, does not seek a husband-a bero must lay his laurels at her feet. The fire of love does not warn her heart; it only inflames her imagination.
