Of the cives of night, And love and delight shall reign.

Lightly o'er the rapid Rhine, Glide we to thy rocky shrine, Lureley ! Friend of all the fond and fair, nswer to thy pilgrim's prayer, Lureley! Like the waves that glitter here, Bright and gentle is my dear, But her father's heart is stone, Harder than thy craggy throne, Lureley!
An thy bold rock cleaves the tide, We are parted by his pride. Ureley ! Who shall chase my lady's fear?

Who shall dry my lady's tear ? Lureley Hark! upon the passing wind, Faintly floats the answer kind-Lureley!
