General ZACHARY TAYLOR;

PUB. DOG .- Hon. Geo. N. Eckert will please accept our thanks for sundry public papers received from him, among which is one of unusual interest, viz, the reports accompanying the President's annual message. These ambrace the official reports of Gen's. Scott, Taylor, Wooth, &c., with elegant illustrations in battle-fields. worth, e.e., with regards and the state of the position of our troops, &c. It also contains the reports of Gen. Kearney. Com. Stockton, Col. Doniphan, and others, who were engaged in independent expeditions with our army in Mexico; with the full Reports of the Secretaries of War, the Navy, and the Treasury. The rispographical execution of the volume is sery bed. If this its to be regarded as a sample of the kind of printing the treew contractors will turn out, we think Congress had better allof it to some persons more capable, even if they impressed a proper more for its. of our troops, &c. A Dog Story .- Some of our read s may perhaps remember a story which appeared the newspapers two years ago, concerning dog in Rhode Island, which, having fallen into a well, existed therein for forty-seven days, at the expiration of which time, he was rescued and restored to his former strength. A similar circumstance occurred near this Borough, recently, in which a faithful dog of Mr. Nicholas Medera was the actor. This dog fell into an air-shaft of a coal mine to the depth of rome thirty feet, and well, existed therein for forty-seven days, at the discovered! He was, to be sure, a perfect skeleton, when rescued; yet it is a question for Natur- respects, learned Dr. to whom we have referred, got out slists whether, when reduced to such condition of weakness that he could not, possibly become more so, he could have existed any longer, without succor ? For the Miner's Journal. THE SCIENCE OF PHRENOLOGY. MR. EDITOR :-- We believe it is now pretty generally and the third was defined and an intained by Phrenologists are entitled to respect and belief. Like every other innovation upon long apprehended and established theories. Phrenology has had to battle long and groupy in order to get admitted into the list of sciences. But in proportion to the duration and severity of the struggle has been the brilliant success Phrenology has attained until she is now awarded by the first minds of Christendom, a high and most flattering place among the distinctive sciences of the great community of man. The prejudices which have, and to a certain extent do now oppose themselves to Phrenology, are being very rapidly modified or radically subdued; for nothing more is requisite to do away with opposition, but to bring to bear the principles which make up this theory. It is well bear any principles which make up that theory. It was known that Phreno ogy rests its claim to attention and assent upon the assumed fact that the animal and human brain is subdivided into distinct and well-defined portions. brain is subdivided into distinct and well-defined portions, each one being the organ of a peculiar property of the mind, or propensity or disposition of its subject. This being adminted as truth, it will at once be seen that a tangible and indistructable foundation is laid for the theory we are speaking of, and that secondary argument will not weigh a straw logically in its opposition. The only intelligent opponents to Phrenology, who have come out by their pen in the way of dissent have based their arguments upon the snatomy of the brain, and the bones ruments upon the snatomy of the brain, and the bones astituting the cranium, which they have asserted are in constituting the cranium, when they have asserted an enablict with the theory of Phrenologists. But where one, entitled to respect as an Anatomist, is thus an opposer to this science, a score of the very highest order of Anatomists are fits patrons. The strongerst and most effectual opposer of Phrenology in this country was the late Dr. —, who wrote a book endeavoring to sustain his views in reference to the discrement. respects, tearned Dr. to whom we have reterred, got out some libergraph plates, representing the normal and ab-normal conditions and appearances of the human sto-meth. be conceded that this dog might also have done it; — but who will determine whether the canine race are physically capable of existing, under circumstances like these, for a longer or indefinite period? The subject, we think, is worthy of investigation; for if the dog possesses this wonderful faculty, he will be become doubly valuable to the home of femile. and feeling much confidence in the utility of their general application, we are constrained to add our mite in giving them prevalence. A majority of those who have neither read or listened to lectures on the science, suppose that its comprehensiveness is limited to the less or greater development of the distinctive organs of the brain, termed in common purlance "bumps." But this is very wide a course ought to give satisfaction to all parties. — fifty cents a chart can be got, describing the mental and animal organism, with much other valuable information
