The Credit System A FOE TO HONESTY.

All the world ought to be by this time aware that the "credit system" is one of the most unmitigated cures that ever affilialist the most unmitigated cures that ever affilialist the distribution of a false and artificial state of society. Therefore, we wish most earn-stily to impress upon all dealers of every kind, in this commercial age, the great palladium of honesty 2nd fair dealing, "Casu and no Two, princes:" If this motto should be universally adopted, mankind would become speedily honest. speedily honest.

Just take the case of the country "cople who supply our markets with provisions—if the scale happens to turn, "but in the estimation of a hair," they are liable to lose all. But let these same persons go into a store to make a purchase of any kr.id, and the chances are that something like the following will take place.

Parchaser.—Itow much do you ask for this?

Merchant.—So much (naming a price thout twice what he is willing to take rather than not sell.)

Parchaser.—Ican't give that price, (waiting towards the door.)

Merchant.—S'cop, Stop, my friend! What will you "Ryrchase,"—(returning.)—Well I do'nt know-you appear 's ask very high for your goods; I will give you Just half what you mentioned just now.

Mershase.—Well, you shall have the goods for that price- but I give you my word of honor that it is far below cost. prices but I give you my word of nonorina it is an below cost.

Now we appeal to men of common sense wether this is honesty, or the reverse of it. If you want good and cheap HATS, therefore, at one invariable and uniform price, and no missake, call on the subscriber. If we are ever guilty of asking two prices take our Hat for nothing.

ERIN. By F. M Norkany Oh, shall it thus forever be?
Shall Erin, pinioned, sleep?
Shall Erin, pinioned, sleep?
Is not the struggle to be free
More noble than to weep
O'er weighty wrongs that crush to earth
The honest some of toll—
That bind the millions, from their birth,
As in a serpent's coil? As in a serpent's coil?

What care the hirelings of acrown.
Though tears of blood were shed?

When Famine's acythe mowed thousat
Felt they the Christian's dread?

Or heard they even with a sigh?

That diches were the graves

Of men who tottered there to die,
Unwilling toglive slaves?

Weep over wrongs! Of what avail
Are tears, or groans or sighs?

Hath not poor famished Erin's wait

On pierced the very skies?

And if, resigned, she wapt for years,
Would not the lordly frown

Freeze, if it could, her falling tears,
To gen a tyrant's crown!

No gen a tyrant's crown; Will men of nerve—eight millions str. Forever thus remain? Forever drag their yoke along, And wear a galling chain? Oh, not—as waves from out the deep Cast pebbler from the strand, The rushing multitude shall sweep. The minions from the land? Then Peace, on angel-wing, shall come, And brighten with her smile The hearth of evry little home That dots the Ocean Isle; That dots the locean iste;
While plenty, with unsparing hand,
Shall scatter far and wide
The riches of a blooming land
Onev'ry rolling tide!
And Erin, robed in fadeless green,
Shall once again unfold
Each fair and charming landscape scene
liter Poets saing of oil;
Her ancient hills, with beauty crowned,
In native pride shall rise;
Like sentingle, to watch around Like sentinels, to watch around Her bright and tranquil skies!

Placidia, the mother of Valentinian III, Emperor of the West, brought up her daughter, Honoria, so severely that the young princess, who was a forward vixen, to get rid of the maternal restraint, wrote a letter to Attila, king of the Huns, offering him her hand, and, as a pledge of her faith, sent him half a ring. Attila, who only wanted a pretext for ravaging the west, took advantage of Honoria's offer, and wrote to the Emperor Valentinian that Honoria was his wife; de-

INFLUENCE OF CLEANLINESS.—A neat, clean, fresh-aired, swees, cheerful, well-arranged, and well-aituated house, exercises a moral as well as physical influence over its immates, and makes the members of a family peaceable and considerate.

The tack tay we were altimore returned, and returned home better satisfied with ourselves an attended the good natured fish who obligingly allowed them solves to be caught.

We had also much enjoyment and excitement in riding. For me a beautiful house was kindly provided—one as spirited as Mars, and as floetas physical influence over its inmates, and makes the members of a family peaceable and considerate of the feelings and happiness of each other; the connection is obvious between the state of mind thus produced, and habits of respect for others and for those higher duties and obligations which no laws can enforce. On the contrary, a filtry, squalid, noxious dwelling, rendered still more wretched by its noisome site, and in which none of the decencies of life can be observed, contributes to make its unfortunate inhabitants selfish, sensual, and regardless of the feelings of each other; the constant indulgence of such passions renders them reckless and brutel; and the transition is natural to propensities and habits incompatible with a respect for the property of others or for the laws.—[Common School Journal.]

A SERNON FOR YOUNG LADDER. The makes the members of a family peaceable and considerate of the feelings for in ideas, an impromptu ride was got up. My habit, cap, and such regimentals, were some miles away but a dress was furnished me, and I had the honor of wearing that same, identical, low-crowned the descendence of the Mediterranean, nor Maccaron, the Hartz Mountains, nor good Rhenish wine; but the hat was becoming, very.

In our evenings, we had Jance and song, hugh, jest and mirthful story—in short, all manner of pleasant and innocent merry-making.

A SERNON FOR YOUNG LADDER.

A SERMON FOR YOUNG LADIES.—Dow,
Ir., in one of his late sermons, gives the following advice to young ladies: My young maidens—know you all want to get married as soon as you enter your 'teens; but it is better to remain single and live upon the sold sone of solitude than to enter your 'teens; but it is better to remain single and live upon the cold soup of solitude, than to marry misery or wed woe. I have but a poverty stricken opinion of the majority of my sex. They are corrupted by the miscalled refinements of the age, so inflated by pride, so fooled by fashion, so afraid of the soil on which they live, so given to cultivating whiskers and moustaches, while their morals are in a most wretched state for want of weedling, and so exercise with heir wants and illustrated.

And was it not well for us to us to revel awhile in the fresh, in visjorating atmosphere of true social freedom—to drink again at the fountain of spark—to drink again at the fountain of spark—and spontaneous joyousness, both of which can only be found in country-life_at this blooming, and glowing season. Ah! my belowed M. I almost fear that mere existence is becoming too. I can only be found in country-life_at this blooming, and glowing season. Ah! my belowed M.
