SALANDERS FIRE, A 4D THIEF-

Choice Poetry.

And should they ask the cause of my return, I will tell them that a man may go far and tarry long away, if his health he good and his hopes high, but that when fless and spirits begin to fait, he remembers his birth blace, and the old burisl ground, and hears a voice elling him to came home to his taker and mother. They will know by my wasted frame and feeble after a three bears they will know by my wasted frame and feeble after a transport of the remembers have a pleasant smile for her from E.

Once more I come—'tis wilding youth may spurn, When far, the burist places of his sures; gut on! when strength is gone, and hope is past, There turns the wearled usan his thoughts at last? So do we change: I hear a warning tone, Yea I, whose thoughts were all of hy-gone times Of ancient glories, and from visious lone I come to list once more the stabbath chimes Of my own home—to feet the gentle nit Steal o'er my brow again—to greet the S In all the places where he shone so fair,

The while each wandering brook in music ran, Answering to Youth's sweet thoughts, but all are fled-l come, my home, I come to join thy dead! Theed the warning voice, oh! spurn me not, My corly friends, let the bruised heart go frea; Mine were high fancies, but a wayward lot Hath made my youthful dreams in sadness flee. Then chide not. I would linger yet awhile Thinking o'er wasten hours a weary train, Cheered by the Moon's soft light, the Sun's glad st

Mirs Scaife. There was not a more exquisite bijou of a cotage in the universe than that of which Lilis Mass her maiden life, and now she was rich in the realization of her wish.

"O, Love! what joy the rosy moments give, Worth all Mahamet's flowery parallee; Alas, but moments atill—for bright to live, Like golden sands that drop before our eyes." If the actual matter of-fact world had been like what poets delight to picture it, all had gone well. But after three months sojournin Laburnam Vills, Lilis fancied that the residence would be pleasanter but sher time mounts a point at Januarian vinit.

Litis fancied that the residency would be pleasanter if it were a little nearer to the Opera and the parks. Governor's Message

Owing to the limited space of our columns, we are only able to lay a portion of this document before our remera. In the communement of his mass, sage the Gowener alludes to the general welfare of the State, and the obligations we are under to the goodness of are overrolling Providence, whose kindness we have all experienced. He also alludes to the death of Gov. Shunk, in a granche extending this many virtues and touching manner.—extolling his many virtues and recommending some measure by the Legislamus in respect to the memory of the distinguished dead, He very bandsomely alloues to the conclusion of the Mexican war, and rejoices at the restoration of Peace. The volunteers and others who took part in the war are highly spoken of for their valor and patriotism, and recommends that some or and partitions. and recommends there was suitable measures be taken by the Legislature to perpetuate the memory of the Pennsylvanja soldiers. The message is lengthy: and after alludiding to some other topics, he comes to the subject of Protection. He says:

The operation of laws on the part of the National frovernment, framed with a view to the assessment of dotire and collection of revenue, is a subject seriously affecting the finances of this Commonwealth. No State in the Union depends to a greater degree on the advantages of whole-come enterprise, and the sate employment of contract on the stability and assess of the sate of the stability and assess of the sate bis wife's enjoyment. Through long hours of the iedious night the husband sat sione—with his pleasant books, as little thought—but really ponsecured in a wife's allections; but which affections were divided with the world! Still, when the carringe s opped at the door, and Lilis fatigued with the night's enjoyment, came into the room, there was a pleasant smile for her from Edgar.

The most brilliant ball of the season at length occurred; and Lilis never looked more lovely than usual, but denied that he was ill. After his wife had departed with her relations, however, he thought it requisite to consult his medical adviser. He had deceived himself with regard to his illness; he had struggled against the corroding influences of neglect; and in the juy of his wife's presence he strove to furget the pain and suffering which her absence always caused.

The ball was at its height, when a strange dark figure suddenly fentering the saloon, called upon Lilis to return. Her husband was dying: The carringe was at the door, into which the astonished wite entered with her strange companion. As they went rapidly alore, the strange woman, in reply to an inquiry from Lilis, said,

"His heart is broken!"

The carriace stopped, and Lilis in agony rushed to her husband's room. But she had come too late? She called upon his name; there was no response; she threw herself shricking upon his lifeless form, but it was cold; and all her kieses could not restore the spirit to its shrine again! With lears and bitter cries, she embraced all that was left of the loved one.

"He is dead! he is dead!" she exclaimed. "It is I who have killed him!"

"Lilig! Lilis! Lilis!" exclaimed a voice; and suddenly she felt her hand clasped in that of another. She started, and looking wildly in the face of the speaker, fell upon his neck in an agony of tears.

It was her husband!
