[For the Miners' Journal.] TO SOPHY N-E. n the fifth anniversary of her birth-day, friend L-e By-ds, M. D.

Dear Sophy, on this festive day, While young friends round thee throng,
My gift receive; the honest lay Sent by a son of song.

Oh! well he wishes thee, awaet child,
Nor for thy future fears,
For thou art amiable and mild, Sweet maiden of five years. How bright a world is round thee now,

And has been from thy birth—
For blest far o'er the crowd art thou
In either parents' worth.
No father's rage hast thou e'er known Or seen a mother's tears; A home where love dwells is thine own, Sweet maiden of five years.

What hopes, what trembling hopes are theirs, May naught those hopes destroy Loved fountain of their joy.

Mayst thou their tender care repay Nor turn their smiles to tears; But be thro' life as pure and gay
As the sweet maiden of five years

The worm may feed on beauty's bed-Thy health may quick decline;
But be then, innocent and good.
And joy will still be thine,
That peace which resignation's heart
Thro's orrows pathway cheers;
Then be thro' life what now thou art,
Sweet madden of Nowan. Sweet maiden of five years. On every sinies pleasure seign—
Life's fleeting hours enjoy,
No slave to rassion or to ease;
Be virtue thy employ.
And when life's guiless joys depart,
Thou'it soar to Heaven's bright spheres,
Wherebut those dwell who 're pure in heart,
As the sweet maiden of five years.

As the sweet maiden of five years. THE LAST INTERVIEW

Here, in this lonely bower, where first I won thee f come, belov'd, beneath the moon's pale ray, To gaze once more, through struggling tears, upon thre, And then to bear my broken heart away: I dare not linger near thee as a brother.

I feel my burning heart would still be thine;

How could I hope my passionate thoughts to smot

While yielding all the sweetness to another But Fate hath willed it; the decree is spoken; Now Life may lengthen out its weary chain, For, 'reft of the, its loveliest links are broken! For, 'reft of the, its loveliest links are broken!
May we but clasp them all in Heaven again!
Yes, thou wilt there be mine, in you blue Heaven
There are sweet meetings of the pure and fond;
Oh, joys unspeakable to such are given,
When the sweet ties of Love, that here are riven,

Unite beyond. A glorious charm from Heaven thou dost inherit; A glorious charm from Heaven thou dost inherit;
The gift of angels must thee belongs:
Then breather thy love in musle, that thy spirit
'May whisper to me, thro' thine own sweet son;
And though my coming life may soon resemble.
The desert-spots, thro' which my steps will flee;
Tho' round thee, then, wild worshippers assemble.
My heart will triumphif thine own but tremble,
Still true to me.

Still true to me. Yet, not when on our bower the light reposes In golden glory, will thou sigh for me : Not when the young bee seeks the crimson roses;
And the far sunbeams tremble o'er the sen:
And when at eve the tenderheart grows fonder, And the full soul with pensive love is fraught.

Then with wet lids o'er these sweet paths thou!

And thrilled with love, upon my memory ponder With tender thought. And when at times thy bird-like voice entrances The listening throng with some enchanting lay, if I am near thee, let thy heavenly glances
Oue gentle message to my heart convey! I ask but fhis—a happier one has taken From my lone life the charm that makes it dear, lask but this, and promise then, unshaken, To meet that look of love—but, oh! 'twill waken

Such raptures here t And now, farewell ! I dare not further lengthen And now, farewell! I dare not further lengthen
These sweet sad moments out; to gaze on thee
Is bliss indeed, yet it but serves to strengthen
The love that now amounts to agony;
This is our last farewell, our last fond meeting;
The world is wide, and we must dwell apart;
My spirit gives thee, now, its last wild greeting,
With lip to lip, while pulse to pulse is beating.
And heart to heart.

· And heart to heart. Farewell! farewell! Our dream of bliss is over, All, save the memory of our plighted love; I now must yield thee to a happier lover, Yet oh, remember, thou art mine above: Tis a sweet thought, and, when by distance parter 'Twill lie upon our thoughts, a holy spell, But the sad tears beneath thy lids have started, And-I alas: we both are broken hearted !

Dearest, farewell ! Select Cale.

THE CHEERFUL HEART.

And yet like shadows letting them depart."

Turning into an obscure street, a few steps brought him to the door of a wretched dwelling, which he entered. Follow now and behold a scene of want and penury, such as may be found sometimes in this world of ours—a scene upon which men look with unconcern, but on which thank God! the angels gaze with joy: a home where poverty struggles with a brave heart and is conquered.

Before the fire sat a pale, sad woman, upon whose features the traces of great lovelines were still visible though sorrow had sharpened them somewhat, and ghastly want done much to dim their beauty. Upon her high and queenly brow the blue veins were clearly visible, as the blood coursed through them with unwonted rapidity.—Her large dark eyes were dim with tears. Some new sorrow had started aftersh the sealed fountian of her grief—and now as she gazed silently upon the red embers in all the utter agony of despair, it might seem that hope had gone forever and God forsaken her.

THE BATTLE OF HOHENLINDEN. A THEILLING NARRATIVE.

By J. T. Headley. The Iser and Inn, as they flow from the Alps towards the Danube, move in paralleled lines, and nearly forty miles apart. As they approach the idly filting with the gay crowd serking pleasure, and men walked as though new life had been given them by the general hilarity and the bracing air.

In the most crowded street was the newsboy, but not the disconsolate, wretched lad who had plodded his way through the storm the night before, to a desolate home and a supperless bed.

You would not have recognized him as he burried along, eagerly intent upon his avocation, and his face all radient with the great hope that struggled at his heart.

As they approach the rewrite, he space between them becomes one elevated plain, covered chiefly with a sombte, dark pine forest—crossed by two roads only—while the mere country paths, that wind through it here and there, on the lat of December, he wis attacked and forced to retrace his steps, and take up his position on the farther side, at the village of Hohenlinden.

Here, where one of the great roads debouched from the woods, he placed Ney and Groochy.

debouched from the woods, he placed Ney and debouched from the woods, he placed Ney and statistic his heart.

They had paid the landlord his rent, and still had sufficient left wherewith to purchase food. It was a merry New Year for them.

Years came and went. Great changes had taken place. The boy had grown to manhood.— High honors were conferred upon him. Wealth flowed into his coffers—his praise was upon every tangue. And at this very hour, upon the banks of the majestic Hudson, his mansion stands conspicuous among a thousand others for its taste and elegance.

He has but one companion—his aged mother than but one companion which with the fire, and watching its flickering light. His influence was felt far and wide, and the poor and wretched of every class and kind come around him with their blessings.

Thank God! thank God!—for every suffering son of man, who comes up from the deep shadow of despair into the blessel sunlight, and, turning gives his word oj cheer to the groping millions beneath him.

Thank God! thank God, that scattered here and there, throughout the world, in many an humble home may be found, men and women, unto whom life presents but little of love, or hope, or joy, and yet who pass along amid its train, while behind them were five hundred.
