ODE TO A GOLD COM. The following ode to an Indian guid coin was written in Ghoricat, Nalabar, by Dr. Leydon, a Scotchman, who is this native country to reside in India, with a view to accumulate a fortune. In the last stages of a fatal disease, brought on by the beat of the climate, be penned these lines. It adds a deeper shade to that sympathy which such lines must awaken, to know that the spirit which dictated them is fied. There will probably be many an adventurer in California, and many a wife of wilow in this country, who will peruse the ode, with a feeling heightened by their personal interest in its sentiments.

Slave of the dark and dirty mine!
What vanity has brought thee here?
How can I bear to see thee shine
So bright, whom I have bought so dear? The tent-ropes' flapping lone I hear For twilight's converse, arm in arm; The jackat's shrick bursts on my car When mirth and song were wont to charm-

By Ghorical's dark wandering streams, Where cane-turfs shadow all the wild, Sweet visions haunt my waking dreams Of Teriot loved while yet a child; Of castled rocks tremendous piled Where lives of youth and friendship smill Uncursed by thee, vile yellow slave! Fade, day-dreams sweet, from memory fade:

The perish'd bliss of youth's first prime.
That once so bright on fancy played, Revives no more in after time. Far from my sacred natal clime. I haste to an untimely grave : The daring thoughts that soured sublime Are sunk in ocean's Southern wave.

Slave of the mine! thy yellow light Glooms baleful as the tomb-fire drear, A gentle vision comes by night My lonely widowed heart to cheer: Her eyes are dim with many a tear
That once were guiding stars to mine;
Her fond heart throbs with many a fear;
I cannot bear to see thee shine.

For thee, for thee, vile yellow slave, I left a heart that loved me true! I crossed the tedious ocean wave. The cold wind of the stranger blew Chill on my withered hear mely, met my view-

And all for thee, vile yellow slave : Ha! comest thou now, so late, to mock
A wanderer's banished heart forlorn, Now that this frame the lightning shock Now that this trane the againing stock
Of sun-rays tip with death bath borne?
From love, from friendship, country torn,
No memory's fond regrets the prey.
Vile slave, thy yellow dross I scorn!
Go mix thee with thy kindred clay!

TO ISABEL. BY GEORGE D. PRENTICE. Yes, lady, then wilt die. That lip of snow, And that pale brow foretell thy early lot— The wing of death is o'er thee—thou wilt go Where broken hearts and blighted flowers Thou art too beautiful to linger where
The rainbow brightens but to melt away,
And the sweet sounds that wander on the air, But swell the dirg of sorrow and decay.

Yes, thou wilt die. The spirit soon will leave This dull, cold exile for its place on high, And, like a bright cloud on a silent eve, Melt in the deeper glories of the sky : Thy home will be where bluer skies are glassed

In softer streams 'mid spring's undying bow'rs,
and where the winds of autumn never passed,
Nor serpents wilthed 'round passion's sweetes

Ay, thou wilt die-and we shall linger here, When all the blossoms of the heart are fied. use on thee, and mourn, with bitter t The cold, the lost, the beautiful, the dead; But, as life's star in loneliness departs, Thy memory still, amid the deep ning gloom. Willshine upon the ruins of our hearts, Like a lone fire-fly on the midnight tomb

THE RELIGIOUS AND BEAUTIFUL By a Pupil of St. Joseph's Academy. There's nothing bright above, below fful in its light my soul can see Some feature of the Deity. There's nothing dark, below, above,

But in its gloom I trace thy love, And meekly wait that moment when Thy touch shall turn all bright again." Ty touch shall turn all bright again."

While contemplating in the vest whiteres the marvellous exhibitions of Omnipotence, the mind is lost in admiration, and adores in silent wonder the wisdom and bequevelence of Him, who has stamped on all his works the impress of beauty and loveliness, and shed upon them the helo of his own divine presence. "No, no, no!" shrieked the bride; "there has been misery enough already;" and darting towards the staircase, she hastily descended; when, beat-

"My near's one a fixed I so much wished to see. I have such a letter here!"

"What is it? Let me see it," said Lionel.

"You must excuse me," returned Sir Charles.

"You will not wrong my friendship, and your manners, to tempt me to show it to you."

"Not for the world, my friend." replied the other; and he forthwith turned the conversation to the current topics of the day; when all the goasip of the gay would had occurred since Sir Charles had left town, was repeated for his amuse ment. It this way nearly an hour was passed, and Mildmay then rose to depart.

"You must," said Lionel; "for I'm invited to exeduing; and bridge don't wait."

"Ging to a wedding!" said the lover. "Then you're in a fit state of mind to become my configuration." "Here at your feet," cried the lover, who bound dant. Read that, and envy my felicity! But them tell you first, the lovel, were so like the beauted which, the passing traveller and the feeding flocks stood still; the singing birds were in contention which should light nearest her, for her bright eyes deciding the singing birds were in contention which should light nearest her, for her bright eyes deciding flocks at the content of the more and loved. Now Charles."

"And he?"

"And he?"

"And he?"

"And he father.

"And he?"

"He is gone, Lydis, disgraced; never to spear in this presence again."

Lydis gave a shrick of joy; and her father, silently taking her hand, placed it in that of Sir Charles.

"The past twelve o'clock," exclaimed Lord Mal-

It is an error to suppose that conversation is talking. A more important thing is to listen discrecity. Mirabeau said, "To succeed in the world it is necessary to submit to be taught many things it is necessary to submit to be taught casny things which you understand, by persons who know not thing about them." Flattery is the emooth pathite success; and the most refined and gratifying: compliment you can pay is, to listent Lay Brayer says, "The wit of conversation consists more in finding it in others, than showing a great dealt of it yourself; he who goes from your conversation pleased with himself and his own wit, is perfectly well pleased with you. Most men had rather please than admire you, and seek less to be instructed—nay, delighted—than to be approped or applicated. The most delicate pleasures is to please another."
