Wherewith you bless and love me,—
They thrill my heart and fill my eyes
With thanks to God above me t From East to West, from North to South, Through all your boundless regions, The staves that tumble from my mouth Have stirred your thousand legions, Have made the hearts of women sche-The minds of men to futter—
Because you felt before I spake,
The words that I would utter: You felt that Britain loved you still, Your foolish fond old mother,-And gave her, -- not against your will, --The love you cannot smother! An felow you cannot smother:
You felt that you, though new, are Old
As England's ancient glories,—
You throbb'd to feel your triumphs told
In all her strains and stories!

O vest dear brothren o'er the ses, Your verses, loves, and letters, l owe you gratitude and praise For gratitude and praises, And when in thanks your hearts you raise His thanks my heart upraises Not that, good Jonathan, we try The game of mutual scratching,-You, Yankee true, and John Bull I . "A few hours since, and after the absence of half a century, I returned to my native village—hoping to find there one person at least who would remember me, and bend over my couch when I should die. But no—I seemed a stranger, or as one forgot." I saw a youth with dark, melancholy eyes and lofty forchead, walking thoughtfully in the shadows of the trees. I forgot myself, and called out the familiar name of an early friend, but the stranger thought the old man crazy—and,

If Biennerhusset had been the only person ruined by Burr, in the prosecution of his enterprizes, charity would suggest a buriel of our emembrance of the exile's decolation. But the victims of Burr, are to be numbered by hendreds. The bees and the peaks of society, elike show the seathing marks of his fiery visitation.

He cherabed no friendship—he raturnes and honered, the drafts of gratitude; he kindled by the firshed of hospitality the flame of lust, undifelt little pleasure in hidding adieu to the Lares of his host, until the dearest that flourished in their shadows were sacrificed. The man's whole being centered on the pivot of selfishness. But for the effection he manifested towards his daughter, his sole moral merits seem to have been courage and coolness; and vet clustering as were the laurels which they wedded to his brow—his baser passions so predominated that he held is more giprious to seduce a woman't than to glitter in the field of letters, to ease the steeps of philoin the field of letters, to scale the steeps of philosophy, or to wave a banner victoriously in bate
